Browder and Fellow Travelers Face Arrest In Passport Forgeries

'Decisive Action in Few Hours' Forecast By U. S.; Jury in N.Y. Receives Evidence

By William V. Nessly.
Post Staff Writer

"Decisive action" against Earl Browder, executive secretary of the Communist Party in the United States, and others said to have used forged United States passports, may be expected "in a few hours," the Department of Justice announced last night.

The action, it was learned elsewhere in the Capital, will be part of widespread activity against many Communists and Communist sympathizers, known as "fellow travelers," who have used false passports in travel between this country and European lands.

It will be accompanied, also, by grand jury investigation of numerous alleged espionage cases in which passports have been faked.

Many Arrests Expected

Extensive arrests, probably today, were expected and there were indications that some arrests may have been made in advance of indictments, though officials here would not affirm such reports.

Developments of a "sensational" nature were predicted by one official who said the arrests would culminate long secret investigative work, at times encountering discouraging difficulties but finally crowned with what was considered an "airtight" case.

The Department of Justice and the State Department, which have participated in the cases to date, last night had centered their activities in New York City, where final procedure preparatory to asking indictments has been under way. The grand jury already has received the Browder case and some others, it was made plain.

Already subpenaed are the records of World Tourists, Inc., a travel organization whose treasurer is Alexander Trachtenberg, member of the Communist national committee. Trachtenberg, before the Dies committee denied there was any connection between World Tourists, Inc., and the party.

United States District Attorney John T. Cahill, at New York, had his staff working on the case on Sunday, the Associated Press said, adding that the investigation is a sequel to the conviction last May 2 of three men on charges of conspiracy in obtaining 16 faked passports for Mr. and Mrs. Donald Robinson, also known under the name of Adolph Arnold Rubens. The Robinsons were accused of being spies for a foreign government. They had been imprisoned in Moscow.

Expect Arrest of Spies

The three men whose conviction led to the present investigation were Aaron Sharfin, former clerk in the Egyptian consulate at New York; Edward Blatt, a lawyer, and Ossip Garber, commercial photographer.

Federal agents expected to round up or expose a number of foreign spies in the present proceedings, the dispatch said. Cahill told Federal Judge Goddard when the three men were sentenced in May that the Robinson passports were used by spies abroad who were associated with spies here, all of them serving the same "foreign state."

Revelation of the advanced nature of the cases came about last night through an exchange of statements by Representative Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey, and and that it expects some decisive action in a few hours.

"It is altogether possible that the Republican committee in some de-

Pilot Lands Crippled Plane On Nose on Golf Links, Saves 8

Down Once to Leave Ill Man, Motors Fail On Second Flight

Five passengers on the Pennsylvania-Central Airline from Norfolk reached Washington yesterday after their plane had landed an epileptic passenger, and, a few minutes later, landed on its nose on a golf course when both motors failed.

No one was injured in the emergency landing, by which Capt. Cecil Northrup, of 324 Mansion drive, Alexandria, preserved the airline's 12-year record of no fatal accidents.

P. S. Simpson, of 606 Rittenhouse street northwest, one of the passengers, said that "the excitement of the man having a fit had upset us all so much that we didn't pay much attention to the motor failure."

The man was landed at the Naval Air Station at Norfolk and removed in an ambulance. Capt. Northrup reported that both motors failed simultaneously soon after taking off, and the retractable landing gear could be dropped only partway into position before an emergency landing.

Simpson said injury was avoided because "we were all tightly strapped into our seats. There

Sailboat Enthusiasm Chilled As Squall Upsets 10 Craft Here

Powerful cross-currents and a 40-mile-an-hour wind upset ten "snipe" class racing boats off Hains Point yesterday and gave at least 17 sailboat enthusiasts an unexpected dousing in the chilly and choppy Potomac.

Two boats finished the race. But the victor has not yet been crowned, since the judges were too busy hauling people from the water to notice who crossed the line first.

Charles M. Trammell, of Arlington, Va., met double trouble when he and his three passengers righted the Nolle Prosse II after a spill and started off again. Ten yards away their boat tipped over once more. The four were rescued and their craft towed to the seawall by an American Dredging Co. tug.

The three passengers were Dr. Richard L. Jackson, of Arlington; John Swayze, of 1316 Columbia road northwest, and Herbert Mueller, of 1927 Kenyon street northwest.

The two boats that finished, one of which will be awarded the "Old Dominion Trophy," are the Cricket II, piloted by H. C. Bush, of Alexandria, Va., and the Defender, piloted by John Jett, of the Old Dominion Boat Club.

Occupants of four boats were rescued by Privates C. A. Parker and F. McGrath, in a Harbor Police motorboat. They were Joe Smith, of 1438 Taylor street northwest; United States Coast Guard Lieut. J. A. Alger, of 1509 Thirteenth street northwest; Ben Minor and his passenger, Carroll Carter, both of Alexandria, and Albert S. Greever, of Falls Church, Va.

Police Search for Baby Taken From Asylum by Mother, 18

District police last night were seeking an 18-year-old mother who allegedly took her 4-month-old baby from the Florence Crittenton Home without permission of authorities.

Officials of the home feared for the safety of the baby, since it was scantily clad and had been exposed to a contagious disease. The mother, Mrs. Dorothy Howard, had left the baby at the home September 8. Mrs. Howard then was admitted to Gallinger Hospital for treatment.

Early this month Mrs. Howard's mother, Mrs. Carrie V. Howard, 38, of 907 M street, was fatally injured while she was on a hurried visit to the hospital when she believed her daughter was in a critical condition.

The elder Mrs. Howard was hurt in an auto accident at Seventeenth street and Massachusetts avenue southeast and was taken to Casualty Hospital. The following day her daughter, hearing of the accident, left her sickbed at Gallinger to rush to the side of her mother just before she died.

Police said that the missing mother was in an "extreme nervous state."

Senate Bloc In Final Fight For Embargo

Borah, Nye Warn Of War Peril in Radio Talks; Vote Possible Saturday

By Arthur F. Degreve
United Press Staff Writer

The Senate isolationist bloc opened its final attack on the Administration's neutrality revision bill last night as leaders of both factions forecast a vote in the upper House this week.

Senators Borah (Republican, Idaho, and Nye (Republican), North Dakota, spoke over National Broadcasting Co. networks. Both contended that repeal of the arms embargo, crux of the controversy which enters its fourth week in the Senate tomorrow, is the first step toward involving America in the European war.

Says Britain Aided Hitler

Borah coupled the argument of the isolationists with a sharp attack upon Lord Lothian, British Ambassador to the United States, for a statement in which he said the envoy "boldly denounced" the present neutrality law. Declaring the British opposed the embargo from the outset and are now actively engaged in seeking to scrap it, Borah quoted Lothian as saying that the house of cards created by the neutrality law "was fatally undermined during the last week of September."

"With some degree of pride he must look down from the Senate gallery, if he deigns to visit that humble scene, and note the progress toward repeal of the law he so early and boldly denounced," Borah said.

He asked Americans not to believe "propaganda" that the destruction of Nazism is the issue in Europe today, or that desire to eliminate any ism ever will precipitate an European conflict.

Nye Ridicules Fleet Theory

"It is territory; it is political power, not Nazism," he said. "Naziism has had no better friend since coming into power than the government of Great Britain . . . from the first entrance of Hitler and his theory of government upon the scene in Europe, they have had the kindliest support of the British government until the break came over the questions of territory and power.

"The British government connived at the repudiation of the Versailles treaty. It especially agreed to the starting of the building of the German navy. It urged France to disregard its treaty for the protection of Czecho-Slovakia. It not only consented to, but connived at, Hitler's seizure of Austria."

Borah warned that by repealing the embargo we are "inviting trouble."

"The ruthless retaliation of the Germans and the shrewd and persistent propaganda of the British could put us into the war overnight, and largely by reason of the very things which we are doing in the way of taking sides in the controversy," he concluded.

Nye declared that the oft-expressed belief that United States security is indelibly associated with safety of the British fleet is one which must have been "conceived in the brain of the Madhatter." He agreed with Borah that the current struggle is one of power politics and

Mrs. Roosevelt Gets 40 Votes For Auto Queen

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt's popularity was disclosed in a new field yesterday when she received 40 votes for queen of the District auto show.

Show officials said, however, that the contest was open only to the 21 regularly nominated candidates. With a large crowd attending yesterday's show at Riverside Stadium, voting was heavy. Leading the rest at the end of the day was Margaret Rosalee Hackett, who, according to officials, conducted an active campaign.

The queen will be crowned with the proper ceremonies Saturday night when the annual show, sponsored by the Washington Automotive Trade Association, closes.

London, Oct. 22.—Beatrice Lillie, the comedienne, will not go to the United States, as had been expected, but will remain in England to give concerts to the troops, it was learned today.

By doing so she will sacrifice £1,000 ($4,000 at current exchange) weekly. This is the estimated fee she would have received for a part in a new Broadway revue.

Allies and Turkey Coordinate War Plans; Stalin Reported Barring Armed Aid to Germany

Russian Economic Help to Be Curbed By Gold Demand, Says Paris Press

By Harold Ettlinger,
United Press Staff Writer.

Paris, Oct. 22.—Josef V. Stalin was reported by the French press tonight to have sent a message to Fuehrer Hitler containing Russia's categorical refusal to commit herself to any military action against Great Britain and France.

Stalin's message, in reply to an appeal from Hitler delivered by a personal emissary last weekend, was reported here to have rejected the Fuehrer's bid for Soviet military aid on land and in the air.

According to the French version of Stalin's answer, the Soviet leader consented to participate in a common German-Soviet declaration on the present political situation—probably much along the lines of yesterday's government statement in Izvestia—but refused to inform the world that Russia is ready to support the Reich on all points and decisions.

Trade Relations Extended

The Kremlin, it was said, was careful to avoid commitments on any formula which would engage Russia to an extent more binding than her present obligations, assumed by Stalin in the recent Moscow talks with German Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop.

Stalin is expected in French circles to keep his promise to Hitler to work for the improvement of German-Russian relations, as was revealed by Saturday's disclosure of the release of 3,000 Germans from Russian prisons and today's announcement of the extension of trade relations between Berlin and Moscow.

French quarters said they were convinced that Russia would refuse to enter the war—on either side—at any price.

Russia's material aid to Germany also will be limited, it was contended by French political writers, because the Soviets are demanding payment in gold for all cereals, minerals, and oils delivered to Germany.

Hitler Seen in Dilemma

The semiofficial newspaper Le Temps, close to the French Foreign Office, contended that Russia's stubborn attitude, coupled with such developments as the signing of the Anglo-French-Turkish pact, has placed Hitler in somewhat of a dilemma.

"Hitler wastes time if he attempts to dissociate France and England by restricting himself to defensive warfare on the French front while intensifying submarine and air attacks against England," said Le Temps.

"Nothing could shake Anglo-French solidarity and (British War Minister) Hore-Belisha's declarations confirm that, for the two Western nations only guarantees for a

Paris to Relax Night-Life Ban To Lift Morale

Paris, Oct. 22 (INS).—French officialdom today strove to bring back the traditional "Gay Paree" and thus build up civilian morale in the face of the war.

With the nation girded to the utmost to withstand the shock of even the fiercest "blitzkrieg" by Chancellor Hitler's forces, Paris and other major French cities decided to lift the ban on concerts and music halls.

Even the circus in Paris will be permitted to reopen this week for the first time since the grim preparations for conflict shut their doors by government decree.

Theaters and movies were told they could remain open an hour later—until 11 p. m.—and even a few of the more famous Parisian night clubs were understood to be preparing for business.

Chinese Gang Slays Six at Wedding Party

Shanghai Raid Believed Aimed at Puppet Official

By Morris J. Harris
Associated Press Staff Writer

Shanghai (Monday), Oct. 23.—Political violence was carried into the heart of the International Settlement last night when Chinese terrorists invaded a wedding party and fatally wounded four women and two men.

A short time before, following another shooting yesterday morning, municipal police were withdrawn from an extra-territorial area, a step seen as possibly heralding complete relinquishment to foreign defense forces of the settlement council's authority in the extra-settlement areas.

Responsibility over extra-settlement roads—which lie just outside the boundaries of the settlement—long has been a subject of dispute between the settlement's council and the Japanese-controlled Chinese administration of greater Shanghai.

13th Nazi Plane Shot Down on British Coast

No Bombs Dropped By Raiding Pair, Air Ministry Says

By James B. Reston.

London, Oct. 22.—A Royal Air Force fighter squadron machine-gunned a German bomber into the North Sea off the southeast of Scotland today, and prevented other raiders from reaching the coast.

Bombers appeared and air raid warnings were sounded along the coast of southeast Scotland and down into Yorkshire while people were in church. An official communique said none of the aircraft observed dropped bombs or crossed the coast, and the "all clear" signal was given within an hour of the warnings.

Members of the crew of the bomber were later seen climbing out of their plane and entering a portable rubber boat. Naval and coastal authorities were advised. No announcements were made that the German flyers were captured.

Ninth Raid In Week

This was the ninth time in a week that Nazi planes have been seen over Britain, and the German casualty today was the thirteenth bomber to be brought down since last Monday when the first attack on Britain took place at Rosyth naval base in the Firth of Forth.

Prayer for British Victory Made in President's Church

By the Associated Press

Hyde Park, N. Y., Oct. 22.—In the little ivied church where President Roosevelt and the King of England worshipped together last summer, the President, with bowed head, heard his minister pray today that the British sovereign be strengthened, that he "may vanquish and overcome all his enemies."

Amid a hush, the Rev. Frank R. Wilson, of St. James' Episcopal Church, intoned also a prayer for "all the royal family."

"O Lord," Mr. Wilson read from a Canadian prayer book, which is not a part of the regular Episcopal service . . .

"O Lord . . . most heartily we beseech Thee with Thy favor to behold the most gracious sovereign, Lord, King George; and so replenish him with the grace of Thy Holy Spirit, that he may always incline to Thy will, and walk in Thy way; endow him plenteously with heavenly gifts; grant him in health and wealth long to live; strengthen him that he may vanquish and overcome all his enemies, and finally after this life he may attain everlasting joy and felicity.

Near East Forces To Work Together To Meet Threat Of Aggression

By Lloyd Lehrbas,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Ankara, Oct. 22.—Great Britain, France and Turkey tonight were understood to have agreed upon a three-point program for protection of their interests in the Near East.

The program, mapped by diplomats and military experts in joint staff talks held under closest secrecy, was believed by observers to include:

Coordinated action by the British and French forces in the Near East and by the Turkish army in event of any aggressive acts within scope of the newly-signed British-French-Turkish mutual assistance pact.

Granting by Britain and France to Turkey a £60,000,000 ($240,000,000) credit, as reliably reported yesterday, of which £25,000,000 ($100,000,000) is earmarked for arms, ammunition and other military supplies.

Recommendation by French and British experts on the type of military equipment to be purchased by Turkey to strengthen her position as guardian of the Dardanelles, strategic gateway to the Black Sea and Europe's "back door."

Allied Generals Leave

Having concluded their important military discussions with the Turkish general staff, Gen. Maxime Weygand, commander-in-chief of French forces in the Eastern Mediterranean, flew to his headquarters in Beirut, Lebanon, and Lieut. Gen. Archibald P. Wavell, British Middle East commander, returned to Jerusalem.

Meanwhile the Turkish government analyzed its position as the result of the breakdown of Turkish-Russian negotiations and the signature of the three-power mutual aid pact.

Some foreign observers here believed Turkey's friendship with Russia had been so severely shaken by the recent Soviet demands in the Moscow talks that they may seriously affect the future course of Turkish foreign policy. Officially, however, the Turks still adhere to Soviet friendship. Russia's demands were reported to have included insistance that only Russian warships be permitted to enter the Black Sea.

Sought Complimentary Pact

The Turkish government and the Soviet successors to the imperialistic Russian Empire have been close friends since the World War. The Russians, sitting on the sidelines, were kept fully informed of Turkey's negotiations with Britain and France leading to the three-power pact.

Observers here understand that—at that time—the Russians were fully aware of Turkey's commitments concerning the Dardanelles under the Montreux convention and the agreement with the British and French.

Turkish Foreign Minister Saracoglu, it was learned here, went to Moscow prepared to negotiate a mutual assistance agreement with Russia which would be complementary to the Anglo-French pact.

Von Ribbentrop Blamed

No one has disclosed to the public just what happened during Saracoglu's three-weeks' stay in Moscow.

Over the Coffee

Washington, Oct. 23.

Some statesmen are curious whether Senator Bennett Clark, of Missouri, regards Missouri mules as munitions of war whose export should be banned by the embargo.

One of the few genuinely diffident men in the Capital seems to be young Senator Lodge, who thinks he needs a lot more experience before he can take Presidential talk seriously.

Congressman Church, of Illinois has lost 17 pounds in a month; he limits his dinners to exactly 1,000 calories.

At Capital functions Mrs. Dolly Gann's chauffeur doesn't take a number like other drivers; the doorman just megaphones for "Dolly Gann's car."

Col. Louis Johnson, Secretary Woodring's right bower at the War Department, smokes a pipe with a metal gadget shaped like a torpedo around the stem to cool and sweeten the smoke. It looks mighty warlike, too.

Our Census Bureau cherishes the startling fact that there are 200,000 more married men than women in the U. S. A. (There are that many immigrants who haven't brought their wives over.)

"—the embargo speakers seem warlike"

Oddly enough, there's far more war talk from the Senators who favor retaining the embargo "to keep us out of war." Most of the so-called "war hysteria" stems from their eloquence, which reminds me of an insurance salesman's bright references to a policy prospect's early demise.

Capital etiquette makes it permissible to out-shout others in ordinary conversations, if you have the lung power. Any one who waits for others to finish a sentence becomes a strong silent man here.

One reason why Mrs. Roosevelt consistently scoops her husband on their breakfast chats is that she goes to press six times a week while he has only two press conferences weekly.

The legal clothing allowance for German women is now two dresses, two work uniforms, two aprons, one sweater, one raincoat, one winter coat, one pair of gloves, three chemises, three pairs of drawers, two petticoats, six pairs of stockings and six handkerchiefs, as revealed by the scouts of Mrs. Perkins' Department of Labor. (It's a good list for an American husband to keep handy.)

"—anti-embargo Senators talk peace"

Even more oddly, the Senate advocates of repealing the embargo talk far more peacefully than the peace-at-any-price boys. The embargo orators often make it clear they'd vote for war under certain conditions; but the anti-embargo boys give the impression they'd never, never vote for war.

Pro-embargo Congressman Lambertson (for example) has informed his constituents that he favors "our going to war for Finland, but not for any international dead-beats." What a tremendous difference a debt payment of $400,000 a year makes!

Republicans Set Up Farm Program Unit

Martin Names 46-Man Committee, Headed by Hope, to Prepare Plan

Declaring the Administration's farm policy "is now a demonstrated failure," House Minority Leader Martin (Republican), of Massachusetts, yesterday announced appointment of a 46-man special committee to study agricultural problems, in order to make possible "the rescue of American agriculture."

Clifford R. Hope, of Kansas, ranking Republican member of the Committee on Agriculture, was named chairman of the special committee.

Martin, in announcing the appointments, said:

"The Administration's so-called remedies have proved to be merely temporary expedients of no permanent value. The many conditions involved in the depressed and unhealthy state of American agriculture cannot be remedied by any single formula. The factors which have operated to reduce agriculture to its present unhappy plight have arisen from causes which extend throughout the economic structure of America and the world."

Some of these causes, he explained, are due to changes attending the progress of civilization, technological developments and alterations in the modes of life, as well as foreign markets, unemployment and soil conditions. He concluded:

"It is imperative we work out an affirmative and constructive approach to the rescue of agriculture. It is an outstanding problem, and upon our efforts in behalf of the farmer will depend in a large measure the future prosperity of our country."

U. S. to Prosecute Earl Browder

vious way has learned of the department's decision."

Thomas was out of the city last night, but the Republican committee, through Franklyn Waltman, director of publicity, said:

"Mr. Thomas certainly got quick action on that statement.

"Speaking of 'devious ways,' how the Justice Department, Thomas, in a statement issued through the Republican National Committee, charged that Attorney General Murphy had been "indifferent and listless" in acting against Browder, who, on September 1, had admitted before the Dies Committee investigating un-American activities, that he had utilized a forged passport in some of his traveling. Thomas declared the Attorney General "owes an explanation to the American people."

Sees "Curious Coincidence"

Shortly thereafter, the Department of Justice issued a reply stating:

"Obviously it seems to be a curious coincidence that the Republican National Committee issues a statement tonight under the name of Representative J. Parnell Thomas, of New Jersey, accusing the Department of Justice of laxity in its consideration of the Browder case.

"The facts are that the department has been actively preparing this case and others for some time did the Department get word of the statement, which was released for publication in Monday morning papers?

"It certainly is a strange coincidence."

Considerable of the evidence going before the grand jury in New York came from StaSte Department files, it was learned, and the unlikelihood of the records being turned over for such use unless they were considered conclusive was pointed out by observers.

Denies Dies Connection

Spokesmen of the two Government departments insisted that the cases were not an outgrowth of the Dies committee investigation.

However, that committee, headed by Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, has dealt at length with the question of use of false passports.

While Browder admitted he had used such a document, he declined to give details. He was asked whether the passport had been issued in the name of George Morris, Stewart, or Brozenburg or Brazenburg, and refused to answer.

Browder, a native Kansan, said he used the names Ward and Dickson in party activities some years ago.

He served some 16 months in Leavenworth prison for his activities against the selective draft in the World War.

Last week Fred Beal, now serving a 17-to-20 year term in a North Carolina prison in connection with the killing of a sheriff at Gastonia, N. C., in the 1929 textile strike, testified before the Dies Committee that when he fled to Russia after his conviction, his passport, issued in the name of Samuel Cohn, had been provided by a Communist Party member.

Refuses to Answer

William Z. Foster, Communist Party chairman in the United States, and the party's nominee for President in 1936, testifying before the committee on September 29, refused "on advice of counsel" to answer when he was asked whether he had used a forged travel identification.

Likewise, Max Bedacht, member of the American Communist Party executive committee stood on his "constitutional right's" in refusing to answer the same question.

Curtailment of Labor's Rights Forecast In Case U. S. Is Drawn Into Europe's Conflict

The Washington League of Women Shoppers, at a noon breakfast yesterday at the Shoreham, heard James B. Carey, C. I. O. secretary, and others on the effects of war on American labor. Shown (from left) are James McNamara, vice president of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes Workers International Alliance; James B. Carey, Dr. Faith Williams, chief of the cost of living division of the Bureau of Labor Statistics; Mrs. Mary R. Beard, historian and labor student, and Ernest K. Lindley, Washington Post columnist

A forecast of drastic effects on labor in case the United States is affected more directly by the European conflict was made by speakers at the first fall public meeting of the Washington League of Women Shoppers at a noon breakfast at the Shoreham Hotel yesterday.

"The best defense against war is to solve our problems at home," James B. Carey, secretary of the C. I. O., said, adding that labor should not be called on to give up its liberties "at the beating of a drum and the waving of a flag."

Ernest Lindley, Washington Post columnist, said he did not think there would be "a chance in the world" for preventing infringement of liberties in the event of a total war effort in this country. When men are drafted to give their lives, he said, "it becomes almost indefensible to argue that labor and capital should go about their accustomed ways."

Lindley asserted that no matter what administration might be in charge, the necessity of getting results would mean a severe infringement of peacetime liberties.

Citing the industrial mobilization plan of 1936, he said that any interruption of production in an essential industry would be considered a strike against the Government; that hours of labor might have to be lengthened.

A referendum in the American Federation of Labor would show a large sentiment for uniting with the C. I. O. and in opposition to war, it was declared by James McNamara, vice president of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes International Alliance and Bartenders International League of America, A. F. of L. organization.

Mrs. Mary Beard, historian, declared that "the grand design of our duly elected Government looks to mobilization for war as the way out of its present awful economic and social dilemma."

Even if the European war were long, she said, "industrial labor could hardly hope for the high wages it enjoyed in the last World War, however closely it united its forces as of A. F. of L. and C. I. O. . . . The preparations of those in power have long been laid for a different distribution of profits this next time, and even tillers of the soil on such farms as have survived the late war will probably find their incomes below those of 1914-1918."

Stephen Raushenbush, author, in the discussion period raised the question, "Can you run a war on a democratic basis?" and said he would be inclined to give a negative answer.

Dr. Faith Williams, chief of cost of living division of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, presided at the breakfast which drew more than 200 members and friends of the league. Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel, president of the league, opened the program.

said this country has not the slightest chance of bringing an end to the age-long battles of Europe.

"To identify ourselves with the British Empire seems foolhardy, especially when our own destiny is so clearly defined as being separate from Europe," he stated. "Our destiny will be worked out primarily within the confines of the Western Hemisphere. It offers a broad enough theater for development of our national interest."

War Profits Debated

The issue of "war profits" was debated over the Mutual Broadcasting System by a group of legislators. Senator Lee (Democrat), Oklahoma, defended his bill which would authorize the President to order a census of the net wealth of the Nation in event it enters into a war.

He said purpose of the proposal was, first, to keep the United States out of war, and, if this fails, to make the country more effective in war. Senator Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, condemned the proposed measure as a "bill to confiscate the Nation's wealth under the guise of national defense."

Neither Borah nor Nye conceded defeat for the isolationists, but all polls indicate only a major upset can prevent an Administration triumph. The Administration's chances in the House are less certain. Surveys by Democratic leaders and reports to Senate Isolationists indicated repealists now have a majority of only 15 votes.

This margin will be increased or reduced by the form in which the legislation is passed by the Senate, observers believe. Some doubtful votes in both Chambers were won over to the Administration when Senate leaders abandoned the 90-day credit provision concerning purchases of American products by belligerents, and agreed to relax harsh shipping restrictions.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky, is expected to make another attempt today to reach a limitation of debate agreement with the Isolationists in order to hasten a final vote. He failed to get one Saturday because Nye and Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, have two more long speeches to deliver against the bill.

They and Senator Wiley (Republican), Wisconsin, who will announce his position today, are expected to consume most of the day.

Barkley hopes voting on amendments will begin no later than Wednesday. Minority Leader McNary, of Oregon, and other Isolationists, agree this is possible and that it is quite probable a vote may come Saturday. Barkley called the Senate to meet at 11 a. m., today, an hour earlier than usual, and if an agreement to limit debate cannot be obtained, he is prepared to hold the members in night session.

5 Companies Face Trust Charges

Five manufacturers of fire-fighting equipment were charged in a Federal Trade Commission complaint yesterday with creating a monopoly.

The complaint, to which the companies were given 20 days to reply, charged the manufacturers fixed uniform prices for unpatented parts, accessories, apparatus and equipment used in the manufacture, assembly or operation of fire extinguishers.

Belgium Confident Germans Won't Invade Her Soil

Copyright by New York Times.

Brussels, Oct. 22.—Most Belgians now seem to be firmly convinced that the Germans will not attack them, at least not this winer.

According o official circles, the Belgians are 90 per cent pro-Ally, and with 500,000 men under arms and splendidly equipped, they believe with growing confidence that they will not be attacked.

But being neutral has suih disadvantages to a country that exists largely on its carrying trade between the countries now at war that there are some who hold that the wise course would be for Belgium to invite the Allies to cross the country and so, they argue, end the war more quickly.

That opinion, however, is kept private for the most part. Officially, Belgium is thorooghly nentral and seemsm to intend to remain so if she can.

New York, Oct. 22.—An appeal to President Roosevelt "to use the powers of his great office to intervene in Europe again in the interest of peace between the nations" was voiced today by John Haynes Holmes at the services of the Community Church at Town Hall here.

"The President sought peace before the war began; he or his successor, will seek peace after the war is done; why should he not seek peace while the war is on, to shorten its duration and diminish its horror?" Holmes said.

Norris Predicts U. S. Will Stay Out of Conflict

However, Nebraskan Sees More Reason to Fight Than in 1917

By the Associated Press

Senator Norris (Independent), Nebraska, said yesterday that while he thought "we have more cause to go to war now than we had in 1917," a different public psychology would keep this country out of the present European conflict.

The 78-year-old Nebraskan, sole remaining Senator who voted against American entry into the World War, said in an interview that the lessons of the last conflict still were fresh in the memory of the public.

"I think we have learned by the bitter experience of the last war that it doesn't do us any good to go to war," he said. "We would like to make the world a decent place to live in, but there are some things that we can't do though we would like to.

"I don't think this country will ever again go to war in Europe, although I do think we have more cause to go to war now than we did in 1917. Hitler has violated every precept of any decent man by his policy of dismembering a country by force.

As to the different public psychology from that of 1917, Norris said, "there is not the hatred, the bitterness and the intensity of feeling that took us into the last war.

"And I know from experience," he added, "that the people pushed Congress into that war against the better judgment of a good many Congressmen."

Norris, a supporter of the Administration's neutrality bill, said he thought that if its restrictions on American shipping were adopted, many of the factors that led to American entry into the World War would be eliminated, such as loss of the lives of American seamen.

"Of course, he said, "some overt act by Hitler might inflame the people. He might order submarines to sink our ships trading with neutral nations. I don't think he would do that, but he is a madman and you can't tell what might happen."

Roosevelt Church Hears Special Rite

through Jesus Christ, Our Lord, Amen."

Bible Is Dedicated

The special occasion was the dedication of a King James Bible given by George VI to St. James' Church as a memento of the occasion when he and Queen Elizabeth worshipped here June 11 with the President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Resting on a golden lectern, surmounted by an eagle with outspread wings, the Bible was used for the first time today.

Mr. Wilson commented on the fact that the visit of the King brought a meeting here between him—the head of the Church of England—and the head of the Episcopal Church in this country, Bishop Henry St. George Tucker.

"That this came to pass in our own little parish church is something to ponder," the rector said.

In the fly leaf of the Bible the King had penned in his own hand: "Presented to St. James' Church, Hyde Park, U. S. A., by George R. I., June 11th, 1939."

Prayer Impresses Congregation

From it, Mr. Wilson drew the morning lesson, the story of creation; but the part of the services that struck the parishioners particularly was the prayer read from a prayer book brought here from St. Anne's Episcopal Church at Campo Bello, N. B., where Mr. Roosevelt has a Canadian summer home and where Mr. Wilson also vacations.

Also from the Canadian book, Mr. Wilson read a prayer asking God to bless "The gracious Queen Elizabeth, Mary, Queen Mother, Princess Elizabeth and all the royal family."

He read, too, a resolution adopted by the church vestry, expressing its gratitude to the King for his gift. The President, as senior warden, presided over a vestry meeting at which the resolution was signed.

Berne, Switzerland, Oct. 22 (AP).—Another American word like "jazz," "gangster" and "okay," is creeping into many a European language.

Women Urge President To Call Peace Parley

Detroit, Oct. 22 (AP).—The Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, in a Great Lakes regional meeting, today proposed a world mediation conference to be called by President Roosevelt to stop war.

The league also advocated retention of the arms embargo and a constitutional amendment giving the people the right to vote on whether the United States should go to war.

Capt. Harris, of Marines, Had Situation in Hand, So, Family Wasn't Hurt on Battered Liner

Saw Gale Coming, Told Wife, Sons to Remain in Bunks

Capt. Harold D. Harris, United States Marine Corps, and his wife and two sons were home at Alexandria, Va., yesterday, unharmed in the President Harding mishap last Thursday because Capt. Harris is a seafaring man.

When he saw the storm making, about 700 miles off New York, Harris told his wife, Mrs. Alice G. Harris, and the boys, Harold, jr., 13, and Charles W., 8, to get in their bunks and remain there. They were hardly settled before a tremendous sea broke over the ship.

"We felt a terrific jolt," Harris said, "and the ship listed about 40 degrees, remaining there almost a minute. At once we heard screams from the corridor outside our stateroom.

"But in a remarkably short time order was restored, especially considering that half the deck watch on duty was injured. The storm gradually subsided though the water was still rough and it seemed the passengers felt the heavy shock was the climax. Some ran for life preservers, but generally they behaved admirably."

At the home of Mrs. Harris' mother, Mrs. C. J. Goldsworthy, 15 Cedar street, Alexandria, which they reached in their automobile brought over in the President Harding, the Harris family rested before going to Quantico, Va., where Capt. Harris has been assigned. For the past two years he was attached to the American Embassy in Paris.

"And," said Mrs. Harris, "one of the greatest thrills I ever had was the day after the storm when I went on deck and saw the Coast Guard cutter Hamilton pull alongside."

New Executioner Breaks In on Job In Pennsylvania

Bellefonte, Pa., Oct. 22 (AP).—A novice executioner—"Mr. X"—came to grim Rockview Penitentiary tonight to begin a career in dealing out death in Pennsylvania's electric chair.

Warden Stanley P. Ashe, of Rockview, announced tonight "Mr. X" was Frank Lee Wilson, 37-year-old Pittsburgh electrical engineer.

Wilson, introduced to newsmen tonight at a dinner at the warden's home, is slim and pleasant looking and bespectacled. He is the father of two children.

He will receive $250 for a single execution and $100 for each additional execution on any one night.

He never before performed an execution but witnessed them, said Ashe, adding:

"He recognizes the law as it is. He is a public servant and feels no more responsible for an electrocution than the judge and the jury."

His first assignment required him to throw the switch three times early Monday morning to put to death Paul Ferry, of Erie, Pa., and Ira Bob Redmon and Willie Bailey, Philadelphia, colored men.

U. S. Expected To Intervene in Chrysler Strike

Detroit, Oct. 22 (AP).—Direct Federal intervention in the task of settling the C. I. O.'s fight with Chrysler Corporation over automobile speeds was indicated tonight with Mediator James F. Dewey in the city.

Dewey, known as the Government's "ace conciliator," came here because of pleas to Washington from Chrysler dealers who asked that their "distress" be relieved, and he was expected to take part when negotiations reopen tomorrow.

The C. I. O. United Automobile Workers "slow down-speed up" dispute with Chrysler—the cause of idleness for 57,500 workers—has resisted for more than two weeks the combined settlement efforts of union and corporation.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents Robert Virovai in a violin recital Sunday afternoon in Constitution Hall. Accompanist: Wolfgang Rebner. Program: Sonata No. 12 in D minor, "La Folia" (Corelli), Prelude from Sonata No. 6 in E major for unaccompanied violin (Bach), Concerto No. 4 in D minor (Vieuxtemps), "Berceuse" (Natalie Townsend), "Caprice alla Salterella" (Vieniavski), "Zephyr" (Hubay), Variations on "Di tanti palpiti" from Rossinni's "Tancredi" (Paganini).

Having shared a program with other artists at his first appearance in Washington last season in one of Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's morning musicales, Robert Virovai was on his own in Constitution Hall yesterday afternoon in a recital which was his local debut as far as the majority of his auditors were concerned. Considered as a debut, it was a very successful one for the 18-year-old Hungarian violinist, who was cordially received by a large audience and accorded the honor of numerous recalls enthusiastic in nature.

A greatly gifted youth, he is at that period of his artistic growth when his virtuosity has temporarily outstripped his musicianship. A dichotomy exists between his remarkable technical facility and his power of interpretation, so far as one can judge from accomplishments in this particular program. He excels in a pianissimo tone of ethereal quality and in exquisitely drawn harmonics. He has the "school of velocity" at his finger tips, and his execution is clean and incisive, but there are faults in his intonation too numerous to be accidental, and his playing sometimes lacks depth when it should reveal emotional force.

His technical mastery gives him the poised air of confidence which is one of his major assets, and this calm assurance is justified by his skill. He handles difficulties with ease and one is never aware of a strain in his dexterity. On the other hand, one is often in doubt about the penetration of his artistic insight and the extent of his poetic imagination. Witnessing his adroitness in performance, one must wonder just what power of personality lies under the dazzling surface of his facility.

Whatever his interpretative resources may be, they were not copiously drawn upon by the compositions he played. He began with Hubert Leonard's arrangement of Corelli's "La Folia," and followed that with the prelude from Bach's E major sonata for violin alone. The concerto chosen was the familiar one in D minor by Vieuxtemps, in which he was at his best in the scintillant scherzo and found wanting in the profundity required by the "Andante religioso."

In compliment to Mrs. Townsend, he placed her "Berceuse" first in a group containing Kreisler's version of Vieniavski's "Caprice alla Salterella" and "Zephyr" by his teacher, Jeno Hubay. The audience liked the airy delicacy of "Zephyr" so much that he was obliged to repeat it.

The recital closed with Paganini's arabesques on "Di tanti palpiti" from Rossini's early opera, "Tancredi." This aria was once as universally hummed and whistled as some of Verdi's are today, and that is probably why Paganini made out of it one of his most ornamental concert pieces. Tradition says that the aria was dashed off by Rossini the day before the first performance of the opera to satisfy the demands of the prima donna, Malanotte, for a showy bit of fioritura, and it was long known in Italy as "L'aria de' rizzi" because it was said to have been written at a restaurant table while the composer was waiting for a rice dish to be cooked.

As a matter of course, the young violinist was not allowed to stop with the end of the printed program. His extra numbers included Paganini's thirteenth caprice, "The Devil's Laugh," and Arthur Hartmann's transcription of Debussy's "La fille aux cheveux de lin." Wolfgang Rebner was an admirable collaborator at the piano, deft, sympathetic and unobtrusive.

Obscure U. S. Soldier of '76 Is Honored

Memorial Marker For John Champe Is Unveiled Near Aldie

By the Associated Press

Leesburg, Va., Oct. 22.—A marker to the memory of John Champe, revolutionary soldier who became a "traitor" in an effort to pass the British lines and capture Gen. Benedict Arnold, was unveiled near Aldie today, where Champe's home once stood.

The memorial, on the estate of Col. Floyd Harris, was erected through the efforts of the Virginia Daughters of the American Revolution.

Mrs. J. L. Pickering of Arlington, Va., great-granddaughter of Champe, unveiled the memorial.

Wilbur C. Hall, of Leesburg, former chairman of the Virginia Conservation Commission, and R. Walton Moore, spoke in praise of the Loudoun County hero.

After Champe had ostensibly become a traitor to the American cause, Hall said, "the British received him favorably and Sir Henry Clinton, in command of the (New York) Post, after interviewing Champe, was convinced of his sincerity and sent him to Arnold.

"The enterprise seemed to be succeeding. Champe had gained Arnold's confidence and learned he was alone in his treason. Plans were completed for Arnold's capture but on the appointed day, the traitor changed his quarters. He had been ordered to Virginia and Champe, instead of returning to American lines with the captured Arnold, found himself on a British transport bound for a campaign in Virginia."

Finns Likely To Yield Some For Settlement

German Delegation In Moscow to Work Out Trade Exchanges

By Witt Hancock,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Oct. 22.—Finnish hopes for a peaceful settlement of negotiations with Russia rose today on the theory the U. S. S. R. was desirous of friendly neighbors on her northern flank, particularly in view of the failure of talks with Turkey.

Speculation on the results of negotiations with Finland shared interest with word Russia shortly would send an economic mission to Germany, headed by Ivan T. Tevosyan, people's commissar of shipbuilding.

Official quarters also watched voting today in the Russian-occupied portions of Poland (White Russia and the Ukraine) to decide whether the region would join the U. S. S. R.

The Finnish delegation, headed by Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, sped toward Moscow by train and was due to arrive tomorrow morning.

Concessions Expected

The Finns were said to be prepared to make some concessions to Russian demands, possibly with islands in the Gulf of Finland, but were determined not "to give too much away."

Observers, pointing out Russia has announced her intention of remaining neutral in the European conflict, said it was not likely she would try to push Finland too far and risk having a warring nation to the north.

A German economic delegations, under Special Ambassador Dr. Karl Ritter, has been conferring with Soviet officials on trade exchanges and unofficial quarters said government communiques were expected soon to the egect that "principal questions have been cleared."

Dr. Ritter left by plane today for Berlin to report to Adolf Hitler. The remainder of the delegation stayed to carry on the talks.

Deputies Being Chosen

Informed sources said the Russian mission to Germany would examine the eyport of machinery and manufactured goods to Russia, complementing the work of the German delegation here.

The plebiscite in the Russian-occupied portions of Poland was being carried out through the selection of national assembly deputies who, in turn, will vote on the question of joining the regions with their counterparts in Russia.

The result was regarded as a foregone conclusion. Observers expected virtually a 100 per cent vote for the Russian candidates. There apparently was no other list and opponents of oining Russia had only the alternative of scratching out the names of the Red nominees.

The government newspaper Izvestia disclosed unemployed workers from Russian-occupied Poland were being transferred to coal regions in the Don Basin, which supplies 60 per cent of Russia's coal.

The government asserted the transfers were "voluntary" and 10,000 already had been taken from Lwow Province.

Finns Prepare Budget

Helsinki, Oct. 22.—While the Finnish delegation is en route to Moscow to continue talks with Russia the cabinet sent to the Diet a new budget, necessary to meet expenses of the present crisis.

The new budget listed a deficit of 418,000,000 marks ($7,942,000) which must be made up by new taxes, transfers from available funds, and increased import duties.

In addition to the added cost of defense preparations taken recently, the budget bill estimated the decreased income of the State at 1,260,000,000 marks ($24,940,000) owing mainly to a drop in customs returns.

Although the nation is confident the Russo-Finnish dispute will be settled this week without war, a feeling of tension has returned to the capitol. Finnish preparations certainly are not being neglected. The frontier districts look like a vast army camp, and martial law prevails.

Measures are being taken to prevent any able-bodied Finnish citizen from leaving the country. The nation apparently is well provided with small arms, and while it is hoped they will not have to be used, the Finns are determined to give no impression of weakness while their negotiators are in Moscow.

Turks See War Move

Ankara, Oct. 22 (INS).—The allegation that Russia is attempting through the current Bulgarian crisis to stir up war between Bulgaria and Rumania was made tonight by a Turkish official.

Referring to the resignation of Bulgarian Premier Kiosse Ivanoff and his cabinet and the present efforts to ferm a new government in Sofia, the Turkish official said:

"The Bulgarian cabinet crisis is a fight between extremists and moderates. Backed by Russia, the extremists demand the immediate return of South Dobrudja (a Rumanian Black Sea district taken away from Bulgaria after the World War).

"This would mean war with Rumania, giving Russia the opportunity to intervene.

"With Bulgaria mobilized to the extent of 500,000 men in arms and with Russia concentrating troops along the Bessarabian and Turko-Caucasian frontiers, only the formation of a moderate Bulgarian government will avert trouble."

Kiosseivanoff to Stay

Sofia, Oct. 22 (AP).—Well-informed sources said tonight George Kioseivanoff would be retained as premier and foreign minister in the new Bulgarian cabinet expected to be announced tomorrow.

The new cabinet will involve only two or three "minor changes," the source declared.

Further conferences may be held tomorrow but they were not expected to alter the situation in which King Boris II was said to have been convinced that Bulgaria must reaffirm neutrality.

out, however, that after the arrival in Moscow of German Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop, during Saracoglu's visit, Russia apparently made new and unexpected demands which Turkey could not accept since they conflicted with Turkish commitments to Britain and France and possibly the Balkan countries.

Russia's surprise nonaggression pact with Germany was reported in diplomatic circles to have been a rude shock. Some Turkish officials are reported to have considered that Russia had "let Turkey down."

Turkey's apprehension concerning the realities of Soviet friendship are reported to have been shaken still more by the Russian occupation of eastern and southeastern Poland and her aggressive diplomacy in the Baltic.

Hope of Blitzkrieg in West Fading in Berlin; Germany Setting Self to Face Long War

By Melvin K. Whiteleather,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Oct. 22.—A terse army report of continued quiet on the Western Front today strengthened a growing German belief that the Allies were trying to crush Germany with a "hunger blockade" and diplomatic attack rather than on the battlefield.

Meanwhile, Propaganda Minister Goebbels opened a new attack on the "radio front," reiterating German charges that Winston Churchill, Britain's first lord of the Admiralty, ordered the sinking of the British liner Athenia, September 3, in an attempt to draw the United States into the war.

Fuehrer Hitler's newspaper Voelkischer Beobacter yesterday ascribed the sinking of the vessel to three British destroyers, and Goebbels took up this charge in challenging Churchill to "tell the truth" and admit that the Athenia "went down under the fire of three British destroyers."

Demands an Answer

Goebbels asked:

"How can you (Churchill) contend the Athenia was hit by a German torpedo when the vessel remained afloat 14 hours? You know from the swift sinking of the heavily armored Royal Oak how a German torpedo works."

Goebbels, attempting to add weight to his accusations, declared Churchill had ignored the charges when made by the German press, but that "he must take note of them if they are made by a German minister—or by his silence will have to acknowledge guilt."

Germany will not let the subject drop, he said.

With only minor activity reported day after day from the Western Front, Germans are asking: "When is the enemy going to strike?"

The conviction appears spreading that the Allies will confine their efforts to tightening what Germans call the "hunger blockade" and increasing diplomatic efforts to isolate Germany.

"Blitzkrieg" Idea Fading

(In London Saturday War Minister Hore-Belisha indicated the Allies would use "waiting war" tactics and said "our commanders are not likely in advance of the time that suits them to risk unnecessarily the lives of those who compose our armies."

Some quarters already are ruling out the possibility of a "blitzkrieg," or lightning war, such as the Reich used to sweep over Poland.

At the same time German leaders have asserted Britain's estimation of Germany's internal weaknesses was wrong and that the Reich can beat the Allies at their own waiting game.

Nazi officials laughed at foreign reports of internal dissension and pointed to the Russian economic agreement and the flow of raw materials and food from southeastern Europe and the Scandinavian countries as means of beating the sea blockade.

new order, without the possibility of aggression, could justify ending the hostilities. Only when such guarantees are available will the prospects for a just and lasting peace exist."

Concessions to Soviets Cited

Le Temps emphasized that the Soviet Union's attitude must be disappointing to Hitler who "has not yet obtained any appreciable counterpart for the enormous concessions made to the Soviets."

The German ambassadors to Moscow and Rome, the newspaper said, are expected to inform Hitler of "certain particularly delicate aspects of the situation which Ribbentrop could not or would not envisage with all the necessary frankness and which reveal the risks involved by the improvised foreign policy of the Reich's foreign minister.

"Both the aims and the methods of this foreign policy will have to undergo complete change," Le Temps continued. "It is not certain that the Fuehrer's authority and prestige will withstand the test of such an experiment."

Van Campen Heilner, the famous American authority on wild game, points out an interesting angle to this: "Camels give more smoking because those choice tobaccos burn so slowly. And I think the way they burn is a very good way to judge the quality of cigarettes too. Argentina, Britain Clash On Recruiting

Activity in Disputed Falklands Islands Perils Friendship

By John W. White

Copyright by The New York Times.

Buenos Aires, Oct. 22.—The Falkland Islands are again putting a heavy strain on the friendship between Argentina and Great Britain. Argentina's most serious political question in international affairs is its dispute with Britain over the sovereignty of these islands, which lie within 200 miles of Argentina's Patagonian coast.

Britain is such a good customer of Argentina, however, that commercial considerations usually have tended to eclipse the political dispute. But now that the British are using the Falklands as a base of naval operations, the political aspects of the question are again pushed to the fore.

Argentina is particularly bitter over the fact that British consulates have recruited troops in Argentina and Uruguay and sent them to the Falklands. This is considered a flagrant violation of Argentine neutrality.

British interests have tried to keep this recruiting secret. But it naturally has leaked out from the families of the young Britons who were enrolled. The numerical strength of the Falkland Islands defense force is not known here, but it is thought sufficient to defend the islands in case of attack.

This recruiting within Argentine territory has led to the formation of a "Com mittee For the Recuperation of the Malvinas Islands" (as they are called on Argentine maps.)

The organization of this committee last week signalizes a distinct change in Argentine popular opinion. When the war started, the Argentine public was strongly favorable toward England and France and anti-German. But Argentines have been impressed with the rapidity of Germany's success in Poland. Nowhere is it more true than in Argentina that nothing succeeds like success. Public opinion shifted te Premier Mussolini after his quick success in Ethiopia, to Francisco Franco when he won in Spain. Similarly it is now less enthusiastic toward Great Britain.

Furthermore, the British have not purchased Argentina's raw materials in the quantities expected, they have quibbled over prices, and they have made it impossible for Argentina to sell to Germany. So there is no longer any desire to let the Falklands dispute lie dormant until the war is finished.

British occupation of the Falklands has always been the main reason for Argentina's vigorous opposition to the Monroe Doctrine.

Argentina inherited them from Spain by the revolution which established the republic's independence. The Falklands became a headquarters for pirates and smugglers, and in 1831 the United States sloop Lexington landed a force and ousted the pirates two years later. In January, 1933, the Americans turned the islands over to the British who have occupied them ever since.

Argentina has always argued, therefore, that the United States, instead of exercising the Monroe Doctrine for defense of argentine territory, actually helped a European nation to seize Argentine territory.

The Argentine government finds some occasion to make, at least once every year, a formal declaration of its sovereignty over the Falklands. The latest occasion was at the conference of neutrals in Panama where Argentina objected to any recognition of British occupation of the Falklands in connection with the establishment of a 300-mile neutral zone around the American Continent.

Urges Armistice Day Be Kept

New York, Oct. 22 (AP).—A growing feeling of futility over the observance of Armistice Day this year was assailed today by National Commander Raymond J. Kelly, of the American Legion who said those who served in the World War "feel more deeply" toward the twenty-first anniversary than any since 1918.

"I earnestly urge that the communities in which our 11,560 posts are located join in the effort to make this Armistice Day one of solemn rededication to peace," Kelly said.

Pope Exhorts Faithful to Pray for Peace

Pontiff Emphasizes Christian Unity in Plea to Simple Folk

Castel Gandolfo, Oct. 22.—The Pope opened his heart to villagers at Castel Gandolfo today, and in revealing the deep sorrow caused him by the European war, urged them to pray to God in order that He may grant peace to the belligerents.

Present at the reception at which the Pope bade farewell to the simple people among whom he had lived more than three months before his departure for the Vatican this week, were all the civil authorities of the village including the secretary of the local fascio.

Children Surround Throne

The huge hall where the audience took place was filled to capacity. Hundreds of children, many of which were dressed in colorful costumes, surrounded the papal throne.

Today being Missions Day, the villagers presented the pontiff with offerings. The Pope thanked them for their devotion and the affection shown him during his vacation in the town, where he said he had dwelt in peace and tranquility amidst the scenery of magnificent beauty.

"But," he continued, "one can see in the distance the evils and sorrows caused by the tribulations and the human storms now unleashed in Europe. It is a world without peace which has, instead, so great a need for peace, for that peace described by St. Augustine, that is, "tranquillitas ordinis" — orderly good-will among men—that peace offered by the Redeemer to men of good will.

Christian nity Stressed

"In this stormy hour among nations," the Pope went on, "it is the down of this peace that the church invokes for nations when it prays the Lord to give rulers and Christian princes peace and real goodwill and to Christian peoples, peace and unity.

The Pope then invited all those who had come to pay homage to him "to unite their prayers to those of the church and his own so vitally necessary in order that the Lord, Builder of Peace, may in His mercy, dismiss the war gale, reconcile nations, protect His church" and bring back peace to the Western World.

Allies Rush to Get Planes if U. S. Ends Ban

By the Associated Press

Spectacular measures to speed the delivery of American-made warplanes to Europe may be expected if the arms embargo is lifted.

France and Britain need in a hurry the fighters, bombers and other craft ordered here to reinforce their defenses against any German aerial "blitzkrieg."

Probably none of the 300 or so planes already awaiting delivery is capable of spanning the Atlantic by air, but they could go part of the way. Indications are that some will leave the United States under their own power, instead of in crates stowed away in the holds of slow-moving, vulnerable freighters.

Several possibilities are open that appear to be practicable and in accord with the Administration's proposed neutrality act revision, and it is a safe assumption that all are being explored.

To save the delay involved in shipping planes in knockdown form, to be reassembled and tested upon arrival, they might be conveyed ready for action in a fast British or French aircraft carrier.

If a Presidential proclamation or neutrality law ruling should bar a belligerent warship on such a mission from American ports, it could sail from Canada, after the planes had been flown across the border.

An even faster and more spectacular method would be to fly the planes several hundred miles at sea to a carrier, which could launch them into the air upon nearing Europe and then speed back to this side of the Atlantic for another cargo.

By this means the warplanes might be in France in three or four days. Difficulties with the new 300-mile safety zone around the Americas might be forestalled by keeping the carrier beyond its outer limit, but still well within the range of any combat plane.

No Censorship Involved

The ban which the National Association of Broadcasters voluntarily imposed upon the sale of time for discussion of controversial issues has caused Elliott Roosevelt to withdraw from membership on the ground that the new rule constitutes "censorship in its worst form." Representative Cochran of Missouri has also characterized the ruling as "a direct assault upon one of the most sacred provisions of our Constitution—freedom of speech."

These views betray a profound misconception of the nature of the problem with which the N. A. B. is trying to deal. The new ruling does not involve any curtailment of constitutionally guaranteed rights of free speech. Nor is there any element of censorship apparent in a resolution that simply defines the conditions under which controversial discussions may be broadcast. Indeed, it can be argued quite plausibly that greater freedom of discussion is encouraged by putting the man who cannot pay for radio time on the same footing as one with money.

Radio transmission is clearly "affected with a public interest." Hence, it has been subjected to Federal regulation on an extensive scale. And regulation will unquestionably become more sweeping as the potentialities of the radio for influencing public opinion are better understood. Without restrictive rules and regulation bedlam would result. Moreover, for the sake of good taste and the preservation of public morals, a certain amount of censorship over programs is essential. There is no difference of opinon on that point; the only question arises as to where to draw the line in specific cases.

The law expressly forbids favoritism in the extension of broadcasting facilities to candidates for political office. It further provides that no censorship shall be exercised by a station over the material broadcast by candidates. While this is a highly desirable safeguard against an injurious kind of political discrimination, it is not a provision made necessary by constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech. It is simply a regulation adopted in the public interest, applicable to a particular kind of public utility.

Congress might decide that it is also in the public interest to forbid or restrict the sale of radio time to all individuals engaged in discussing controversial issues. That might be considered a logical extension of the regulatory principles already embodied in the communications act. To avoid such inflexible legislative restraints, however, the N. A. B. has tried to stop the sale of time for controversial broadcasts by voluntary action.

Whether this ruling will afford opportunities for fuller and freer discussion of controversial issues will depend, of course, upon the amount of free time accorded disputants, and the ability of broadcasting stations to distinguish between controversial and noncontroversial presentations. There is certainly room for doubt as to the practicability and desirability of the new policy. But there is no warrant for assuming that a man's freedom of speech is invaded because he is unable to buy time on the air to broadcast his personal opinions to the world.

After all these centuries that famous trio of wine, women and song is finally in danger of being broken up. And not by prohibition, or a world-wide rendition of Lysistrata, or even a ban on musical instruments, or a dictatorship. These famous triplets, which have gaily buried their worst enemies and outlived their friends and companions, are now being menaced, of all things, by melons. Indeed, that common fruit is threatening to supplant one of the company.

This leaves us, as it doubtless does others, somewhat confused. We are accustomed to melons, and to wine. We have even done away with a fair share of melon cocktails. But Mr. Samuel Untermyer is experimenting with still another combination. He is bringing up his melons by feeding them on benedictine, port wine and cognac with the hope of permanently flavoring the fruit. His method is to run a cotton wick from a bottle into an incision in the plant's stem.

We can't help wondering why the process might not reverse itself and Mr. Untermyer find that he had port wine flavored with melons. In either case, a dangerous precedent is threatened. It is possible, for instance, to imagine a meal with everything from soup to nuts elaborately flavored with martinis or cognac. But, all things considered, there is even less to be said for eating our drink and drinking our nourishment than for the prospective new trio of melons, women and song.

Negotiations At Moscow

Coincident with the departure for Moscow of the Finnish delegation which is to confer a second time with Soviet leaders, the Helsinki government announced new measures in preparation for a possible emergency. A "neutrality and integrity" loan has been floated to meet the expenses of mobilizing the army and volunteer corps. Taxes have been drastically increased. Defense measures have been speeded up.

Finland is taking no chances. She is getting ready for every eventuality. The Finns are determined to fight if necessary to prevent their nation's independence and neutrality from being compromised by Soviet Russia. There is a growing feeling in Helsinki and elsewhere, however, that the Kremlin will not go to extremes in seeking to impose its will on Finland. Instead, it is expected to permit solution of the Russo-Finnish question on a reasonable basis.

The point is that Russia has little to gain and much to lose by going to war against even so small a nation as Finland. War might unleash in the Soviet union those centrifugal forces which have been kept in check only by means of a long succession of drastic measures. So, while Russia pushed ahead in Poland, Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, where no considerable resistance could be offered, she may be content with much less than her original demands in the case of Finland, which has shown an unmistakable determination to resist.

Aside from Russia's internal situation, there is another factor that may induce her to avoid plunging into war at this time either against Finland or any other nation in Europe. As long as the Soviet remains neutral, she stands a good chance of achieving a very strong and even decisive position in Europe after the war, particularly if the war leaves Germany, France and Great Britain considerably weakened. At the same time a policy of neutrality in Europe will permit Russia to play an increasingly potent role in the Far East.

There are indications that the rulers of the Kremlin are not leaving this latter possibility out of account. Despite the temporary truce made with Japan along the Manchukuo-Mongolian border, Russia has made no deal with Japan comparable to the deal consummated by Stalin and Hitler. On the contrary, Russia is continuing to provide China with needed supplies.

Indeed, there is evidence that during the past few weeks Russia and China have been drawing closer together. This development has ominous possibilities for Japan. The island empire's resources may not be sufficient to continue indefinitely a war which is proving so costly and which is so difficult to bring to a successful conclusion.

One cannot speculate with any degree of certainty regarding Russia's future role in Europe. Having embarked anew on an imperialistic course, she may go ahead with it regardless of obstacles. There is good reason to doubt, however, that the Kremlin is prepared to pursue a forward policy in both Europe and Asia. The fact that Russia has thus far shown no disposition to stop the aid she has been rendering China or to make a conclusive settlement with Japan is significant. It suggests that her action in Europe may be limited to opportunistic advances where resistance is not likely to result in war.

Mr. Seal's Merit Plan

Civil service reform in the District may not be more urgent than general reorganization of the local government, but it is less controversial. Virtually everyone agrees that Washington should have a personnel system of its own. Regardless of what may come of efforts to overhaul the entire District government, therefore, the creation of a genuine merit system for the Capital should not be longer delayed.

Two prominent defects in the present system stand out. It has no foundation in law but is merely an arrangement of convenience between the Board of Commissioners and the Civil Service Commission. Should that arrangement break down, the District would once more be at the mercy of the spoils system. Even now political pressure from members of Congress plays much too prominent a part in the staffing of District agencies.

In the second place, use of Federal machinery, regardless of how competent it may be, will never give a local community the type of personnel system it ought to have. District employes should realize from the beginning that they are responsible to District officials. Not only appointments but also efficiency ratings and promotions should be in the hands of a local personnel department operating solely in the interests of the community.

Apparently the civil service system proposed by Corporation Counsel Seal, as part of his District reorganization plan, would overcome both of these shortcomings. It would create a personnel department and a Board of Civil Service Appeals. The director of personnel could call upon the United States Civil Service Commission for aid in conducting examinations or other technical service. But the disadvantage of having municipal employes rely upon a Federal agency for their ratings and solution of their problems would be eliminated.

Under this arrangement, moreover, the merit system would be especially adapted to Washington's needs. Municipal jobs would be reserved for local residents—those living within a 12-mile radius of the Capitol Building. Yet Mr. Seal's plan is flexible enough to permit the direct appointment of a specialist by the Commissioners when no Washingtonian appears to qualify for some assignment of unusual importance.

The obvious advantages of this one section of the Seal plan should appreciably strengthen the District reorganization movement.

A Decade Of Depression

Ten years ago this week the country was in the throes of the greatest stock market panic in our history. A collapse of inflated security prices had been long expected in informed circles, but few believed that it would be of the catastrophic proportions actually reached. And it is doubtful whether anybody foresaw that a decade after the event the United States would still be struggling with the problem of 10,000,000 unemployed.

The tenth anniversary of the day when Wall Street saw billions of dollars of paper profits swept away finds the country experiencing a pronounced upturn in economic activity. There are some who even envisage a possible return to the boom days of the twenties. Those who harbor such illusions, however, have little conception of the great changes that have transformed the world of today and made a reversion to the conditions of the post-war decade impossible.

In the light of the economic trials and tragedies of the depression years, the boom period that followed recovery from post-war deflation no doubt appears to many persons to have been an economic millenium. But that was far from being the case. There was widespread distress among the farm population. Taxes were oppressive, and farm indebtedness, contracted when agricultural prices were at war-time highs, was causing trouble.

Conditions in other parts of the world were also in a state of flux. Extensive loans made by American investors to Germany and other countries were producing an unstable prosperity abroad, and stimulating our export trade accordingly. It was inevitable that when this heavy capital outflow ceased, as it soon did, financial crises would develop abroad, to aggravate our domestic difficulties.

Viewed in perspective, the stock market collapse of ten years ago appears as the logical aftermath of an inflationary movement that got out of control. The nature of the boom and the causes of its collapse are not so difficult to understand as the intensity and prolonged duration of the subsequent depression.

We have had depressions before and always looked forward confidently to recovery from their ravages. The present depression has proved to be very different, however, from earlier ones. We have discovered that prosperity is not waiting "around the corner," and some observers have begun to fear that it may have vanished forever.

That fear is intensified by the knowledge that no probable increase in productive activity will provide employment for millions of idle men. Moreover, past experience has made us wary of the prosperity induced by war. Today we realize that permanent recovery from depression cannot be obtained through such artificial stimuli.

There are, of course, many factors to be considered in trying to explain why this depression has been so much worse than previous ones. But among the outstanding differences to be taken into account is the radical metamorphosis of the industrial system itself. Recovery from depression by resort to wholesale liquidation is no longer in favor. In the words of an English economist, Prof. Lionel Robbins, "We eschew the sharp purge. We prefer the lingering disease."

There is not sufficient evidence to date to justify the conclusion that present-day methods of combatting depression have undermined the economic constitution of society, as Prof. Robbins intimates. But it is true that our efforts to mitigate the shocks of economic recession by governmental intervention have increased the rigidity of the economic structure and left us new problems of adjustment that are far from being solved.

Horrors Of War At Eton

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Only a Briton can properly appraise the enormity of what has happened at Eton College. The war, with its inevitable informalizing of Britain and frequent drills with gas masks, has led Eton to abolish the top hat for its boys, and what they will wear now for head covering to match their cutaway coats and fancy collars is a grave worry.

The top hat, together with the dark blue tie with its pale blue stripe, has been an honored badge of the ultra-ultra. The two call for bows from ordinary non-Eton folk, and pass their exalted wearers into the halls of the mighty—some say through the pearly gates themselves.

Eton without toppers? London without Big Ben, Paris without the Seine's Left Bank, ham without eggs would not be more lost. Yet now, high-hat Eton is going low-hat, and the very graying stones of old England must crumble in dismayed speculation.

Army Medical Center

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Any articles commending the Army Medical Center, are of special interest to me.

The press has frequently praised the institution, but have failed to mention the name of the medical officer of the U. S. Army, who was responsible for its initiative, Maj. William Cline Borden. If it had not been for his unceasing endeavors the reservation would not exist today. He was the commanding officer of the Army General Hospital at Washington Barracks, and as soon as the ground was purchased, the property, was placed under the jurisdiction of his hospital and shortly after named the Walter Reed U. S. Army General Hospital, which is now a part of the Army Medical Center. This made Maj. Borden its first commanding officer even before construction had started. I don't know of anything on the reservation that gives him recognition.

I sort of grew up with the hospital and made the initial sketches for Maj. Borden.

Aiding The Allies

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The arguments, pro and con, regarding the repeal of the embargo, are directed to keeping the United States out of war.

We all want to keep out of war but this desirable situation cannot be effected by legislation.

Whether or not we are drawn into the present war will not depend on legislation. If we should eventually enter the war it will be because the American people are inflamed with anger and demand that we participate, as in the case of the World War after the sinking of the Lusitania. And this will be because Germany, as in the World War, after a couple of years of success, lost her perspective, and thought she was invulnerable.

I favor the repeal of the arms embargo, not, as I have indicated, that it will insure a neutral position which will "keep us out of war," although I believe the tendency will be in that direction, but because I believe it will be a direct and positive aid to Great Britain and France, who, as has been said, are our front line of defense. Why should there be any pussyfooting in this matter?

We should not forget that while the "democracies" naturally are fighting first in their own interest, incidentally their success will be to our advantage and we should do everything in our power to aid them.

Communist Schisms

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My attention has been called to a letter that appeared in The Sunday Post, signed by Messrs. Owen, Gerber and Goodykuntz, which gives the impression that they were members of the Communist Party and resigned as a result of the Soviet-German nonaggression pact.

I wish to assert that these men never were members of the Communist Party, but have been associating with the various Trotskyite groups. During this period not a single member of the District Communist Party has resigned, all the fake and phony letters to the contrary notwithstanding. We can, however, report a considerable growth in membership and improved branch attendance.

The publication of this and similar letters and editorials to the effect that our membership is leaving in droves is indicative of a species of wish-thinking at present extensively indulged in by the entire American press.

Soviet Union's Relation To Constantinople

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Is the government of Russia to abjure the garb of godlessness for a robe of religion?

Did Russia's elation, near to ecstacy, at the Nazi proposals for Bolshevist amity, arise from a prospect of acquiring Constantinople?

At the Polish Corridor the British displayed a green light, the Nazis a red. When Poland's independence was extinguished, Russia participated with Germany in the seizure of Polish territory.

A century ago the British government hoisted at the Bosporus, and displayed to Russia, a "stop" signal. Does the Bolshevist government now descry there a "go" signal exhibited by Germany?

When a few centuries ago, a Byzantine princess was married to a Russian potentate, Russia thought of an eventual uniting of the Byzantine and Russian domain. At the decease of the Byzantine Empire in 1476, when the Turks captured Constantinople, Russians proudly deemed their nation to be the lawful heir of Byzantium, and desired that the head of the Russian Church might be the supreme patriarch of the Eastern, or Greek, Church. Will the Communist regime endeavor to materialize that claim and realize that vision and so make Constantinople the East's Holy City, as the see, or seat, of the Greek Church, as Rome is the capital of the Western or Latin Church?

For hundreds of years the religious Russians, possessing no Eternal City, sauntered to Jerusalem, and thought wistfully of Constantinople, the ancient seat of their religion.

There speculation suggests an inquiry of the Bolshevist antagonism to religion. The Communists are not ignorant of the truism that the elements of religion are as requisite to a people's mental health and contentment as nutriment is to their physical existence, and that religion, from time immemorial, constituted, as it continues to constitute, a most enduring part of a nation's foundation.

We might reasonably suppose that the Communist government never intended to destroy religion itself; that it's objective in what seemed to be a war against the church was the abolishment of the superstructure, not the fundamental of the Russian religion, so that there might remain no part of the Czarist hierarchy and cult.

Was the recent Russo-Turkish negotiation, ending in disagreement, a Communist play for the diadem of Constantinople? May not the temporary object of the Communists be the creation of a dispute that, at convenience, might be deemed by them a justification of hostilities?

The defeat of the Byzantine Empire profoundly disturbed the thought and the economy of Europe, precipitating the Renaissance, the epiphany of the New World, and the refinding of anciently traversed ocean lanes to the Indies.

What might be the results to Europe and to the Levant of the acquisition by Russia of Constantinople none may predict with certainty. EDWARD CONN.

Modify Conditions

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Declaration of Panama, setting up a zone of neutral waters around our hemisphere south of Canada from which belligerent activities are to be excluded, represents a valuable forward step in the promotion of our hemisphere security. But this step will only promote the neutrality of the American republics during the present war if it is accepted and respected by the European belligerents.

Without their prior agreement, active American efforts to prevent belligerent activities within this zone may aggravate rather than decrease friction with their governments, since such efforts could properly be regarded by them as infringement of their recognized rights as belligerents.

The British can hardly be expected to abstain from naval action within the zone, thereby voluntarily relinquishing rights traditionally recognized in international law, if their agreement to do so would benefit Germany. But it would not appear impossible to obtain their acquiesence on conditions along the following lines:

1. That the American republics would undertake to prevent the activity of German submarines or surface war vessels within the zone.

2. That German merchant vessels which have taken refuge in American ports to avoid capture should not be permitted to leave those ports unless they proceed immediately outside of the neutral zone. Without some condition to this effect, German shipping would be free to circulate within the zone and British belligerent rights to prevent their circulation nullified.

"Good Americans"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Noting comments from readers of your publication on Col. Lindbergh's speech, permit me to state my view. I, also, think that Col. Lindbergh's speech was an excellent one. He spoke with reasoning and frankness concerning the peace and security of the nations of the Western Hemisphere.

Canada needs our protection, and she, therefore, must sever any ties which bind her to England. I do not see why any citizen of Canada should object to it. A great number of Canadians now take this view, and I hope it will not be long before they all become good Americans. MAURICE LAVELLE.

Dies Committee

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When the Dies Committee first came into existence I thought that the time had come at last when all the groups sponsoring racial discord and veiled propaganda for totalitarianism would be thoroughly exposed. During the past month, however, I have been watching with great dismay the committee make such inroads into the principles of democracy as all of the bunds and super-patriotic organizations could not have hoped to do in years.

I refer particularly to the raid on the office of the American League for Peace and Democracy. I know a great many people who belong to the league, and they stand for just what the name of the group implies, peace and democracy. Has standing for those principles become a crime in the United States since the Dies Committee was installed?

I am surprised that the newspapers have not been more vigilant to such a threat to our institutions.

The Grand Duchess

We have had a Grand Duchess visiting us here in our apartment at No. 315, fifth floor rear . . . Did you ever wonder what happens to the Grand Duchesses who live in democratic America on the proceeds (a modest annuity) of that book of memoirs? Well, I (for one) know considerably more about them now.

She arrived with large amounts of luggage, unperturbed by the paper parcels coming undone and the case so heavy that it took three of us to lift it. For the first time of my life I felt a real need for a lady's maid to look after it all. Instead, our bedroom, that opens with folding glass doors into the living room, was soon a brilliant disarray of maribou feathers, pearls, white satin and beauty preparations: all permeated with an Oriental perfume peculiarly like incense. We were overcome; it was so much like Marlene Dietrich in the desert.

And I must say that our Grand Duchess looks like a Marlene of 30 years hence. She is quite beautiful still in that rarefied way: the same exaggerated uplift of the eyebrows, the deep-voiced accent (though I think in that time even Miss Dietrich could conquer English) . . . And, true to style, after a search for her special bath soap (a nationally advertised, 5-cent variety) she joined us for the evening in a breath-taking costume.

In a black wool house coat, she looked more distinguished than ever: as simple as it was bewitching, with a train, and wide sleeves lined with apricot color and pinned high on her shoulders to show the whiteness of her arms (the reward of their never seeing the sun!)

"A Macy sale," she answered to our exclamations. "The sleeves were too long so I cut them off to make the train, and lined the rest with an old slip dyed tango color" . . . (Did Macy's or Marlene teach her the trick of rouging her ears—oh, ever so lightly—along the rim?)

She always wears these long housecoats—unless she is going out—because they are graceful and formal and feminine and generally evocative of prewar grandeur . . . Her other costumes are entirely for the street: "what the well-dressed older women will wear," classic and unpretentious, only her hats (with the exactly perfect tilt) making the most of her veils and earrings. Oh, my Grand Duchess, we could learn a lot from you——

If only we had the leisure!

Regretting the severity of our hair and scorning our casual application of lipstick, our Grand Duchess sits one hour (I timed her while the coffee cooled on Sunday) before the mirror with a trap of make-up tools—and, smiling mysteriously and provocatively, she creates the portrait face that she once had three maids and her youth to do for her. It is very subtle. There is never an indication of paint or "good preservation," and she is rightly proud of her daily achievement.

"I owe it to myself to look my best—though I shall never marry again," she says, and then turns her green, cold eyes on the younger generation. "And you, my dears, would get better jobs and more excitement out of life if only you paid more attention to your appearance."

In self-defense I must add that she really admires our fairly average neatness and dark attractiveness, but it is our flair for the dramatic that gives us "style" in her eyes. Still, such straight-from-the-shoulder advice is often hard to take!

May I give you a few items to bear in mind the next time you entertain a Grand Duchess? It will make things run more smoothly if you pay careful attention.

1. Beds must never be turned down on the diagonal, but straight across—and of course the mattress must be turned every day (viz: The Princess and the Pea).

2. Simplest food is best—like scrambled eggs and lamb chops—(because there are so many proletarian things she can't eat, like pork, and you can't always get oysters), and get her to make the salad.

3. Never argue, whether about the most superficial or the most fundamental facts of life: remember that she is a lady whose past is so super that the present is entirely useless, except as it reflects and romanticizes the past.

4. Never let anyone else, in person of in conversation, even for a moment, become the center of attention. She is used to the spot light.

From our point of view that is largely snobbishness, but on the other hand she often surprises us with her adaptation to democratic ways. She discussed face powders for 20 minutes with a (completely fascinated) clerk in the five-and-ten; she really likes our California wines better than imported champagnes and she adores coco-cola; she enjoys doing her own housework in a tiny apartment, where she can indulge her gourmet's taste, and she, of course, looks down on her rich friends who know so much less about good living.

As for the brilliant disarray from her many suitcases: well, the ceaseless and twisted strands of pearls are from the five-and-ten, restrung on dental floss. She has a few fine jewels left, and wears them to the best advantage. (Delicate gold hoops set with emeralds for her ears; a large topaz ring, that is strangely sunny on her tragic hand). Her underthings, white—for pink would be a little vulgar, is all a national make, "guaranteed to last longest, sold in every department store." And the perfume—of course it wouldn't suit everyone—is nothing more than the crumbly red sticks of incense you buy in any Chinese store.

What shall I add? She is petulant as the proverbial spoiled child if she feels the least bit slighted, but you realize she adores you when she brings out her precious Bacardi and makes a double round of cocktails at 11 a. m. the morning the heat doesn't go on.

Glamour is always hard to live with, but it does make up for quite a lot of things.

Fair Enough

Free Exploitation

IN OTHER DAYS, say about 25 years ago, the two most reliable ways to make a lot of money with the least effort and ingenuity were to get out a patent medicine or start a religion. A truly miraculous remedy for stomach troubles could be made for a few cents a gallon out of bismuth, rhubarb and tap water and retail at 75 cents a bottle, and medicine fakers received bushels, literally, of hand-written testimonials from grateful Americans who thought some marvelous discovery had cured them of cancer, among other ills, and joyously reported that they could eat fried pork without distress.

That was truly the golden age of American medicine. Some of the remedies were pretty good, at that, being made according to old, standard doctors' formulas, but the Government and many of the newspapers gradually silenced the claims made for most internal medicines, and the field is now pretty well abandoned, although a few rich veins are still paying big profits.

Religion Still Open To Most Exploitation

RELIGION, however, is still open to the freest exploitation, and politics has taken the place of medicine, so there are still two fields of opportunity for men and women of the proper genius. They can be worked separately, but it is being shown that they can be combined very effectively to the great profit of a professional God-man or great loving spirit under the very special protection of the United States Constitution.

There is still a temptation to carry on healing, through faith, incantations and the laying on of hands, but that is likely to be a troublesome sideline and not worth the bother. The law is peculiar about miracle-working in matters of physical illness, but the Constitution says that Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof.

That phrase can be invoked to deter interference with the most dangerous fakery and, in conjunction with the revenue act, seal the accounts of a racketeer against inspection by the income tax department. To interfere with a fraud in his preaching is to persecute him for his religious faith and martyrize him.

Americans Called Most Susceptible

HOWEVER IDIOTIC, vicious and fraudulent his claims to divine credentials, the authorities, remembering the absurdity of Joseph Smith's hallucinations and the trouble that was caused by attempts to suppress him, are inclined to let him play his suckers until they run out of money or drift off, wild-eyed and slobbering, after some new prophet.

There are no people more religious, or, rather, more susceptible to religious nonsense than the Americans, and they have waves or spells in which, baffled by problems and excited by debate, they tend to go crazy in herds. At such times—and this seems to be the beginning of a spell—hot-eyed demagogues, including rogues of the most wicked cynicism, come bawling out of the mists of superstition and fear and hypnotize weak souls with strong words.

The radio vastly extends their radius much as though the spitting cobra, which ordinarily can spray its venom only a few feet, by some discovery intended for the benefit of man, suddenly were enabled to poison victims a thousand miles away.

"Aryan" Italians Laughed Aloud

EUROPEAN PEOPLES, Orientals, even savages—all of whom God knows, have had more troubles and much more terrible ones—do not respond to such appeals as periodically drug the vaunted common sense of countless Americans and set them to braying, burning and temporarily believing the most infantile.

Hitlerism, with its nonsense about the Aryan race and the mysterious spiritual quality of the German soil, is a great exception, but the lunacy of those Germans who do subscribe to this madness may be attributed to a far more trying experience, lasting many years, than anything the Americans have suffered. The Italians were ordered to believe themselves Aryan and laughed aloud.

Monopoly Unit Quizzes Life Firms

A sales questionnaire has been sent through the anti-monopoly committee to 68 legal reserve life insurance companies, including a group which reported more than $100,000,000 of insurance in force at the end of 1938, the securities and exchange commission announced yesterday.

The questionnaire, according to the SEC, seeks information on both the home office and field policies of insurance companies, in meeting problems of the sale of insurance. It was sent to companies which have more than 90 per cent of the total insurance in force of legal reserve companies operating in this country.

Work Week Cut To Affect 5,600

Approximately 5,600 employes of District industries will be affected by the new national work week of 42 hours, the Wage-and-Hour Division of the Labor Department announced last night.

The new provisions of the fair-labor standards act also will increase wages of 700 workers here from 25 to 30 cents an hour. Under the hours provision of the act employes working more than 42 hours a week must be paid time-and-a-half for overtime.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

Col. Lindbergh's Imperialism

NOT ONLY must Canada be forced into our Lebensraum, according to Col. Lindbergh, but we must adopt a similar attitude toward the whole hemisphere.

Great Britain and France are now being squeezed in a war in which the majority of Americans are sympathetic to their cause, and against a system which Americans have been of all people the most vigorous in denouncing.

But this war gives us a chance to play not only the role of Germany toward Czecho-Slovakia the colonel's Canadian policy), but the role of Russia toward the Baltic states. In the guise of neutrality and to right the injustices of the unpaid war debts, which begin to assume for us the function served by the treaty of Versailles for the Nazis, we are to find our Latvia and Estonia in Jamaica, Bermuda and the West Indies in general.

We are, in plain language, to adopt the new morality of ruthlessness and "vital necessity" as against the rule of law, translated in Lindberghian terms into the "impersonalism of the surgeon's knife."

"Our Domain," according to the colonel, extends "from Alaska to Labrador, from Canada to South America," and in the whole of the Western Hemisphere "no foreign powers are to maintain their influence."

Huge Fleet Held Needed For Defense

LET US TAKE a look at "Our Domain." The Western Hemisphere comprises approximately 15,000,000 square miles of territory, or 30 per cent of the land area of this planet. On it live some 221,000,000 people, more than half of them citizens of the United States. "Our Domain" has a coast line 44,000 miles long, and its most distant points are as far from each other as from almost any points on the seacoasts of the globe. For instance, Cape Horn is more than 1,000 miles farther from New York than San Francisco is from Yokohama. It is more than 2,000 miles farther from San Francisco than it is from New Zealand. Rio de Janeiro is 1,500 miles farther from New York than New York is from Marseilles.

In case we alone were to undertake the defense of this domain, the Cape Verde Islands and the Azores, now belonging to Portugal, would be essential to us. They are 3,000 miles nearer to Rio de Janeiro than is New York and nearly 1,500 miles closer to Rio than are any of the West Indies.

To defend "Our Domain" by the power exclusive to this hemisphere—to defend 44,000 miles of coast line and 30 per cent of the earth—we should have to build a Navy as large as our own and the British combined. We should require a military establishment the like of which this country has never known. Inasmuch as more than half of the population of the hemisphere and the great mass of the industry and wealth of the hemisphere are here, we should have to pay for it, or for most of it.

American Nations Would Quarrel

AND IF WE wished to keep out all "foreign influences," we should certainly have to defend it against the Americans themselves and the allies they would seek. The 20 American nations not belonging to the United States of America are more intimately tied, culturally and economically, to Europe than they are to us. Although we are the largest single sellers in the South American markets, we are by no means the largest buyers. For South America and Canada, with the exception of coffee, lumber and certain metals, produce the very things of which we have a surplus, and compete with us in our own markets.

Inasmuch as we have not yet been able to deal with our own agricultural surpluses or to find a way of putting a cotton shirt on the cotton grower's back and sufficient sheets on his bed, we are biting off a terrific problem.

BUT THE WHOLE idea is illusory—namely, that we would be allowed to pre-empt 30 per cent of the earth as Our Domain, and that one of the richest and emptiest parts of it. The geopolitical theories, of which the colonel has given an American interpretation, also include the population-pressure problem.

The envisioned Germanic era will be active in colonizing the rest of the earth with the "inferior" races that it is intended to comb out of Europe. If Germany wins the war in Europe, Germany still hasn't sufficient "living space," because Europe as a whole is crowded. If Russia and Japan monopolize Asia, and Italian and Spanish needs have to be taken care of, where will the new Europe look for Lebensraum? It will turn to this hemisphere again, as it has in the past.

The whole of Europe, exclusive of Russia, lives on a territory 30 per cent smaller than the area of the United States, let alone the Western Hamisphere, which is five times as large. And in western Europe live twice as many people as in the whole Western Hemisphere, and more than three times as many as in the United States. And they are just as smart as we are.

OVERCROWDED EUROPE will not relinquish its influences in the Western Hemisphere without a fight. And Europe all together, and especially organized under German military socialism, would be strong enough to wreck us, militarily and economically. They could not wreck us economically by free and fair competition, but they could wreck us, as Germany threatens to wreck Europe, by revolution, force and the ruthless undercutting of prices made possible by militarized labor.

'Have-Nots' Held To Be Real Menace

THE PROPHETS who indulge the comforting, if gruesome, thought that after this war Europe will be finished, that no one can win the war, and that Europe will be economically bankrupt and thereby no longer a menace, seem unable to make deductions from even the most recent and obvious facts. The most threatening people in the world are not the most prosperous, the so-called "haves," but the most economically weak, the so-called "have nots."

In 1919, after a long war and a disastrous defeat, Germany was bankrupt. In 1923, after a gargantuan inflation, Germany was bankrupt again. In 1933, when Hitler came into power, Germany had had three years of terrible depression, and was bankrupt again. She is still bankrupt.

But that has not prevented her from building the most formidable military establishment of any single nation, and doing it without money. Her bankruptcy, on the contrary, has furnished her with the inventive and argument for aggrandizement, and has compelled an economic policy parasitic on the nations with money and one which undermines their living standards and their economies. She needs raw materials and gets them by blackmail, force and by bartering and dumping her own goods and those of other nations, regardless of price or cost of production. The same is true of Japan, another impoverished nation. A bankrupted Europe in which the Nazi state was dominant would be looking for markets and raw materials, and both are on this hemisphere—with only half the population of Europe to defend them.

SOUTH AMERICA, chafing under the new imperialism of the colossus of the north, and Mexico, a country singularly receptive to revolutionary propaganda, might decide to hail Europe as a liberator. We would then hear all the things said against us that are now being said against the British Empire: that we want to hog nearly a third of the globe; that we have only half the population of Europe on a third more territory; that there is room in California (and there is) for twenty million people; that we don't know what to do with our own wealth and still want to withhold the Western Hemisphere from European influences.

And all this would have a reception in this hemisphere the moment we departed from the good-neighbor policy, for South America is more European than it is North American, and the colonel's proposed policy toward Canada would have its reaction, too.

English Help To Us Is Cited

THE THREE THOUSAND miles of ocean that separate us from Europe, like the 4,770 that separate us from Brazil, have assured us freedom, independence, security, a tolerant democratic life, no compulsory military service and prosperity, because we happened to have a powerful collaborator, possessed of the world's greatest navy, with bases all over the world; and because this way of life has not been challenged by another, more highly organized, more disciplined, more self-sacrificing, more Spartan and more warlike for more than a century. It is so challenged now. Great Britain has had an interest in maintaining the status quo on this hemisphere and an interest in preserving our system of government and trade, because it was similar to and complementary to, however competitive with, her own.

THE 3,000 MILES of ocean did not prevent us in 1918 from sending 2,000,000 men across it to fight in the last war, and that ocean runs both ways. Political circumstances and those alone—the distribution of sea power, the aims of international policy—have made it possible for troops to cross only one way up to now.

Believe it or not, the United States of America needs friends. Col. Lindbergh's program, if it were seriously carried out, would disrupt the existing solidarity of the Americas and contribute to encouraging a world coalition against us for the next world war: the next in the series of Caesarism wars predicted for our age by a German, Oswald Spengler.

WHEN GEN. JOHNSON describes Col. Lindbergh's imperialism as peaceable he is making a remarkably obtuse statement. The colonel himself was harder-headed.

When he accuses this column of being pro-war, he slanders it. This column is pro-reality.

And for Gen. Johnson to accuse Mr. Lippmann of emotionalism is just funny.

Submarine Proposal

By Ernest K. Lindley

Favors The Allies?

BY PROHIBITING submarines from entering American territorial waters the President has flagrantly invited the accusation that once again he has acted to favor the British and French. He could have obviated this accusation if, at the same time, he had prohibited the surface naval vessels and armed merchantmen from entering our territorial waters.

In defense of the President's action a stronger case can be made, however, than his airy assertion that surface craft and submarines are "as different as apples and pears."

First is the fact that the behavior of surface craft can be observed much more easily than the behavior of submarines, which can sink quickly into invisibility. This is the argument on which most stress is being laid by the President's advisers, although in itself it is not enough to justify the President's discrimination.

Allies Don't Need Our Ports To Refuel

Secondly, and more important, the ban on submarines will facilitate the enforcement of the Declaration of Panama in our waters. And to the extent that other Latin American nations follow our lead in barring submarines from their ports, it will facilitate the enforcement of the Declaration of Panama throughout the Western Hemisphere.

The Declaration of Panama prohibits acts of war in a broad belt of water surrounding the Western Hemisphere south of Canada. In practice such acts of war are likely to result almost exclusively from the torpedoing of merchant ships by German submarines and the consequent efforts of the Allies to destroy German submarines. By closing our ports to submarinees we discourage the Germans from coming into the western Atlantic—although their long-cruising submarines could come across and return without refueling.

Why not begin at the other end, by prohibiting Britsh and French destroyers and cruisers from entering our ports? The practical answer is that the surface naval vessels of the Allies don't need to come into our ports to refuel. They can refuel or find refuge in the Western Hemisphere by going into their own ports in Canada, Bermuda, Jamaica, Martinique and elsewhere. We cannot keep their surface naval vessels out of the Western Hemisphere's security belt without taking over their possessions in this hemisphere. We can discourage the Germans from coming because they have no bases of their own. Our interest is not in who is inconvenienced the more, but in keeping acts of war at a reasonable distance from our coasts.

Submarine Can't Warn Armed Ship

Thirdly, there is a curious omission in the neutrality act, under which the President put down the ban on submarines. This act authorizes him to prohibit both submarines and armed merchantmen of belligerent nations from entering our ports, but it does not authorize him to prohibit regular surface naval vessels from doing so. The latter power almost certainly can be found in earlier statutes, which give the President extraordinarily sweeping powers.

But when the existing neutrality act was passed in 1937, Congress was thinking of a particular problem which arose during the World War of 1914-18. During that war our Government favored the armed merchant ship over the submarines in ways which, according to the best authorities, were in utter disregard of international law. We insisted that in attacking a merchant vessel the submarine should observe all the time-honored rules: that it should give warning, that it should visit and search the merchant ship, and that it should assure the safety of the passengers and crew before sinking its prize. At the same time we insisted that an armed merchant ship should be regarded as if it were unarmed. Obviously a submarine could not come to the surface, give warning, visit and search, and provide for the safety of passengers and crew if it were in danger of being sunk by shells from the merchant ship. The arming of merchant ships by the Allies compelled the Germans to fire their torpedoes without warning.

German Contention Was Acknowledged

THE REASONABLENESS of the German contention on this point was finally acknowledged even by so fervent a friend of the Allies as Robert Lansing, Secretary of State. Early in 1916 he proposed to President Wilson that we get the belligerent nations to agree to a modus vivendi, under which the Allies would disarm their merchant ships and the Germans would agree to abide by the old rules for surface craft. Wilson thought the proposal was sound. But when the Allies protested, he and Lansing dropped it like a hot cake.

Now, as in the World War, the British are arming their merchant ships and we are treating them as unarmed merchantment. But between the World War and now there is this vital difference. Then we were a party to the conflict between the submarine and the armed merchantmen. We insisted that American citizens should be allowed to travel in safety on the armed merchantmen of belligerent powers. We insisted that the submarine should observe all the old rules prescribed for surface craft. This time we are not a party to the controversy. We are prohibiting our citizens from traveling on belligerent vessels, whether they are armed or unarmed. We intend to keep our own ships off the North Atlantic trade routes. In the main combat areas of the sea we are letting the submarine and surface craft fight it out without advice or protest from us. Therefore, neither the submarine nor the armed ship controversy holds the danger for us that it did in 1914-17, and we can approve any action, no matter how lopsided its effects on the belligerent nation, which serves our own national purpose of keeping the war at a safe distance from the Western Hemisphere.

Peace As A Means

By Barnet Nover

Appeasement, American Style

DURING THOSE eight fateful years between Japan's seizure of Mukden and Hitler's entry into Prague, the great European democracies pursued an almost unbroken policy of surrendering to the aggressors.

Except for verbal protests, they permitted Japan to take over Manchuria without any effort to prevent it. They did nothing when Mussolini began his war on Ethiopia. And when prodded into belated action by an aroused public opinion, they refused to take those drastic measures—such as an embargo on oil—which alone might have forced Italy to abandon the war.

They viewed with alarm Germany's entry into the Rhineland. They gave their tacit consent to Fascist intervention in Spain by continuing the nonintervention policy long after its fraudulent nature had been exposed. They did not lift a finger to save Austria, the key of the post-war system in Central Europe.

By that time, in fact, the policy of giving way to the aggressors, passive for seven years, became active. The Munich settlement actually had the collaboration of Great Britain and France. And an old policy had secured a new name—appeasement. The argument in its favor was that if you fed a tiger enough milk it would begin to purr like a cat.

BEHIND THIS policy of appeasement it was always possible to discern a number of motives.

At the time of the Mukden incident and its aftermath many Englishmen, including some in very high places, felt that Japan had a more or less legitimate claim to Manchuria anyway and, therefore, should not be too strongly opposed in its efforts to seize that territory. Japan, they believed, would be so busy subjugating and digesting Manchuria she would have no time or energy for adventures in Far Eastern areas where British interests were more considerable.

It is more than likely that in 1935 Great Britain and France held their fire because they did not want to push Mussolini too far, being fearful that if they did the Duce would be overthrown and Italy plunged into revolution. They didn't want that to happen. They regarded Mussolini, despite the Ethiopian advenure, as a prop of Europe's peace and a valuable potential ally against Hitler.

The appeasement policy as practiced with regard to Hitler had somewhat similar roots. There was also the factor of conscience. Large numbers in Great Britain and France were convinced that Germany had been given a raw deal at Versailles and while deprecating the methods used they argued that the ends achieved by Hiler's treaty-smashing course were not in themselves bad.

ONE OTHER REASON for the appeasement policy must be pointed out, however, for in a sense it was central. That was the unwillingness of the British and French governments to take any measurements against the aggressors which might ultimately involve the use of force. The motive was praiseworthy; the ultimate results ghastly. To get the Japanese out of Manchuria, to compel Mussolini to abandon his war in Ethiopia, to force Hitler to withdraw from the Rhineland or keep his hands off Czecho-Slovakia, might in each case have meant going to war. The British and French governments did not want to go to war. Anything was better than that. So, instead of taking strong measures that probably would have prevented war, they followed a weak-kneed course.

THERE CAN BE no question of the fact that in steadily giving way to the aggressors the European democracies, so far from preserving peace, made war inevitable. Certainly a large body of Americans feel that way, yet during at least four of these eight years the United States, too, has followed a policy of appeasement—in other words regarded peace as a means rather than the end of foreign policy.

IT IS NOW part of the American credo that the United States got nothing out of the World War. We asked for no territory and got none. We had hoped to "make the world safe for democracy." In the course of time democracy began steadily to lose ground. We hoped by our contribution of blood and treasure to bring a better world into being. On this score there is understandably bitter disillusionment. And because of this disillusionment large numbers of our citizens began to accept as true the theory that the United States had been hoodwinked into going to war.

One point is forgotten in this lachrymose discussion of America's role in 1917-18 and that is that our participation in the war had revealed our tremendous strength. On the basis of what the United States did in those years it could be assumed that no ruler or any responsible nation would trifle as the Kaiser had done, with legitimate American interests.

There is no reason to suppose that this assumption is any less true now than it was at the end of the World War. Yet with the passage of the original neutrality law we gave notice to the world that the rights we had fought for we were now prepared to abandon. In so doing American leaders, like the Chamberlains and the Lavals and the Bonnets, were making peace not the end but the instrument of policy. And the danger to our peace in the pursuit of such a policy is no less than proved to be the case in Europe.

The same appeasement spirit is evident in the arguments of those urging the maintenance of the arms embargo. Peace, they say, can be preserved only through the propitiation of the agressor. But if anything has been proved during the past eight fearful years it is that the very reverse of this is true.

Edison Declares U. S. Needs Navy Second to None

New York, Oct. 22 (AP).—Acting Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison asserted today the Navy is dedicated to the task of resisting successfully "any type of attack from any quarter."

"A Navy 'second to none' is required to defend the great stake that is ours," Edison said in a speech at the New York World Fair's Navy Day exercises. He added the United States Navy has no foreign commitments and plans all its operations "without alliances."

He paid tribute to the "official and personal interest" of two native New Yorkers—Theodore Roosevelt and Franklin D. Roosevelt—in the Navy and said it was "a significant factor in the rise of American sea power."

LEADERS OF THE TEEN-AGE CLUB OF THE E STREET CENTER OF THE Y. W. C. A. PLAN A HOLLOWE'EN PARTY. THEY ARE SYLVIA BONDAROFF (LEFT), FIRST VICE PRESIDENT, AND KITTY PREDMORE, PRESIDENT

A girl stranded here, far away from home, climbs the steps of a mellow old red brick house where she's sure to find a welcome in the midst of Washington's downtown clamor. Scurrying up the steps behind her is a schoolgirl who lives in the next block, but is coming to this same old house to join in a candy-pull.

Needs of both—stranger and neighbor—are met in the building which is the E Street Center of the Y. W. C. A. As a Community Chest agency, it will be open this afternoon for the "Go-and-See" tours from 4 to 6. But even with these visitors filing in and out, the doorstep at 614 E street northwest will be no more a crossroads today than any other day in the week.

Primarily a transient home for girls with limited means, the building has become also a center "loaned" to a neighborhood which has no community house of its own.

A girl whose money is dwindling away while she is looking for a job turns to this address as a place to stave off despair. She comes into a building alive with activity. From one room float the songs of little girls who would probably be playing on the noisy downtown street unless they had this place.

Center of Neighborhood Activity

Through the afternoon and evening, groups attend meetings and parties in the high-ceilinged creamy-walled rooms of the building, which still looks like the home it was 100 years ago.

Then after the building quiets down for the night, the stillness may be interrupted by a latecomer. It may be a girl referred there by the Travelers Aid Society. Or, as happened not long ago, it may be a mother with two small children. Her drunken husband had put them out of the house.

The building began to become a center of varied activity when girls of the neighborhood were attracted by the swimming pool. Although it is now not in condition for use, the girls have continued turning to the building for club meetings, games, parties.

When a Travelers' Aid office moved into the basement, the girls began asking: "When are you going to move out, so we'll have a place to play?" A first-floor room, an art gallery in the house's affluent days, was divided for office space. The basement was turned into a recreation room. Then, more girls started coming.

Miss Aleada Nelson, the director, says: "We have not attempted to set up a recreational program in our transient residence, but the work done in the past few years has been the 'plus' to give a little happiness to a number of little girls in the neighborhood, who sought the Y. W. C. A., asking for a place to play and sometimes a place to get warm."

Recreation Program for Limited Purses

Women with limited means and unemployed young women come on Wednesday afternoons for recreation they might be denied if they had to buy it—musical programs, educational motion pictures, travel talks.

Church and civic groups, the neighborhood council, a war veterans' organization—all find a meeting place.

The center has no case worker, so girls with special problems are directed to other agencies. Last year, 60 per cent of these were referred to the Travelers Aid.

A girl referred by other agencies or a girl who is looking for a job in domestic service can have a bed at the E street Y. W. C. A. for 50 cents a night. For others, lodging is higher. But in cases of special emergency, a free bed may be provided, as was done 234 times last year.

"We're strong on antiquity and cleanliness," declared the house secretary. Both qualities were evident in the spacious rooms of the old Benning-McGuire house, the only mansion left in a neighborhood now taken over largely by business.

Out of a scrapbook the history of the house was pieced together—built about 1830 by Capt. William Benning, later rented to Samuel Ingham, Secretary of War in President Jackson's Cabinet, later bought by John C. McGuire. About 20 years ago, it came into the hands of the Y. W. C. A.

Russia Held Circling Reich In Baltic Plan

German Drive East Is Considered Broken By Stalin's Moves

By Otto D. Tolischus
Copyright by New York Times.

Riga, Oct. 22.—Combining a new nationalism with its old Bolshevism as joint instruments of an imperialistic foreign policy and backing the two by armed might, Russia today is moving into Baltic states in force at same time that Baltic Germans, masters of that region for seven centuries, are being shipped back to the land of their ancestors in final defeat and at least temporary surrender of National Socialism's fondest dreams.

As Russian troops march in from the east, German transport ships, carrying a disillusioned but obedient human cargo, are plying the Baltic Sea westward bound. The proudest ramparts of Germanism in the east that were to form bases for further advance are hauling down their flags.

Result of Hitler Policy

This dramatic turn of events, which brought Russia back into Europe with a vengeance and with still unpredictable consequences, is perhaps the most startling development of the present war, the historic importance of which may be found to exceed even the latest partition of Poland, which was the immediate cause of the war.

In a sense it is a direct, if paradoxical, result of Fuehrer Hitler's policy of aggrandizement designed to fulfill Germany's "Drang Nach Osten."

For in order to avert a war on two fronts and keep her back free while fighting the west, Germany is being forced to pay a price that is enabling Josef Stalin to turn the tables on Hitler in a way which is making Moscow rather than Berlin the political capital of Europe today.

As viewed from the Baltic capitals, Stalin is seeking not only ice-free ports but also "security"—for the ports of Russia and for the Soviet regime. In this aim he turns not only against Germany but also against the Scandinavian states.

Stalin's moves assume the aspect of a "preventive encirclement strategy" designed to check Germany, whose army circles frankly contemplate the prospect of a future clash with Russia. In any case Russia's maneuvers provide a jumping off place for Bolshevist expansion westward if Germany is crushed or if the war drags out long enough to exhaust both sides.

Baltic Bases Planned

For that reason, Stalin is stationing substantial Russian garrisons and Russian air bases in the Baltic states as well as in the Russian share of Poland, creating a fortification line to stretch from the Hungarian border to the Baltic Sea through Lithuania. Naval bases are to be built along the Baltic shores, permitting the Russian fleet to dominate all the eastern bays of the Baltic Sea and from them threaten Germany's lifeline to Scandinavia, along which move her essential food and iron ore supplies.

According to well authenticated reports, Germany has even abandoned the fortification of Memel. Although rumors of an immediate return of the Memel district to Lithuania are officially denied, it is fully expected that irrespective of who owns Memel technically, Russia sooner or later will demand its use as a transit port.

Future Plans Hinted

In the Balkans, Stalin has already cut off Germany from Rumania, and to some extent Hungary is obviously merely biding her time to extend the "preventive encirclement strategy" to the south as well. Which may explain the comparative complaisance with which Moscow accepts Turkey's pact with France and Great Britain.

At the same time Stalin's demands on Finland are taken to indicate that Russia's plans go far beyond the Baltic Sea, and look toward nothing less than an attempt to reach out across northern Scandinavia to ice-free ports on the Norwegian coast.

Latvian Position Explained

Riga, Oct. 28 (AP).—William Munters, Latvian foreign minister, declared today his nation "easily, even inevitably," could have been a theater of war had Russia felt it necessary to take steps to strengthen her security in the Baltic.

Speaking to a joint session of Latvia's corporative chamber, which succeeded Parliament in 1934, Munters said it is important to Latvia that Russia feel safe, otherwise "she would take steps regarded as necessary to strengthen her security."

preparing a major air drive against the British North Sea patrol, British convoys, and British naval bases.

As evidence of this, plans are now in an advanced state for handling the thousands of refugees who are expected to rush out of London and the midland industrial areas when the bombs start falling. Though the large cities are supposed to have been evacuated in the first hours before the war started, hundreds of thousands of women and children are still in the danger areas, and officials are completing plans to take care of these when the rush starts.

While it is stated officially that four German planes were shot down yesterday raiding a British convoy, there is reason for believing tonight that seven failed to return to their bases.

A Grimsby trawler discovered two German airmen, badly injured, clinging to the wing of their bomber in the sea today. Another trawler picked up three other Germans who had been floating on the sea in a rubber boat since yesterday afternoon. They were taken to the hospital in Grimsby.

Though the R. A. F. was praised highly for fighting off the raiders this week, there is no tendency in official quarters to claim that this week's experience with German bombers proves much, if anything.

Dawn Patrol Guards Dutch Neutrality—a Difficult Task

By Fred Vanderschmidt
Associated Press Staff Writer

Croningen, The Netherlands, Oct. 22.—From a trim little airport in placid northeastern Holland a Netherlands dawn patrol is listening and flying on the tough and ticklish job of keeping the Netherlands out of war.

"We get elephants' ears in this place," one tall flying officer said as he paused to listen to a high-pitched motor.

"This time it is only a car on the highway. Other times it is those fellows."

"Those Fellows" Come Over

Nearly every day, usually early in the morning, it is—"those fellows" coming over the neutral Netherlands land or sea frontiers which lie so inconveniently between Britain and Germany.

To the Netherlands dawn patrol it makes no difference whether they are German or British planes. The Netherlands is neutral. It is the job of the patrol to chase any plane which violates the neutrality of the Netherlands, catch it if they can and intern the crew.

"We try to catch them but it is not an easy thing to do," an officer said.

"If they are headed east they are across the German border before we can get after them. If they are going west sometimes we chase them to the North Sea.

"Up in the waters of the Dollart Gulf across from the German naval base at Emden there is no frontier line for a flier to see. Our territorial waters are supposed to go three miles from the shore but there the Germans say the frontier is the ebb tide mark. That is barely half a mile from our shore."

"Not Very Good Shooting"

Last Tuesday Netherlands planes went up on border patrol while British raiders were over Emden. Some planes were fired upon by German antiaircraft. I talked to one young Netherlands pilot who dodged two shell bursts.

"They thought we were English," he said. "We were about 3 miles away. It was not very good shooting."

The Netherlands now is marking her planes with an orange triangle instead of the tricolored "bullseye" which resembled British and French markings. However, it is not always possible to see markings from the ground.

Officers at the airport said they thought both the German and British planes were trying to avoid the Netherlands.

"But sometimes they are in a hurry to get home," the officers added with a shrug.

I asked about the crew of a German seaplane which I heard had been forced down and interned.

"Yes," said one officer, "they were very angry about it. There was some shooting. Now they are held on one of our islands. It cannot be helped."

expected to form a Chinese government which would be recognized by Japan.

The result of the municipal police withdrawal was to make the issue of extra-settlement responsibility tend to resolve itself into a clear-cut international problem with Japanese on one side and the Italians and British on the other.

Terrorists who invaded the wedding ceremony also wounded the bride and a number of guests, all Chinese. Target of the attack was understood to have been Tu Chang-Chung, a minor puppet official, who was unharmed.

The attack was the third act of violence in less than a week. Americans felt that a serious threat to American lives and property might develop. They planned to confer later today with a view to requesting American authorities to consider measures further to safeguard lives and property.

Nomura, Grew to Confer

Tokyo (Monday), Oct. 23 (AP).—Japanese Foreign Minister Nomura today was reported to be planning a series of talks with United States Ambassador Grew in an attempt to settle major problems affecting Japan and the United States.

It was said in reliable circles that the conversations, which might begin this week, would embrace what Grew described in a speech before the American-Japan Society last Friday as the "bombings, indignities and the manifold interference with American rights in China."

Grew, saying his words came "straight from the horse's mouth," declared the American people regard "with growing seriousness the violation and interference with American rights by Japanese armed forces in China in disregard of treaties and agreements."

Nomura was said to be arranging conferences with Premier Abe and War Minister Hata regarding ways of obtaining more rigid control of the Japanese army in China.

Argentines Fight U. S. Trade Pact

In Buenos Aires, Agentina, Oct. 22. Hearings on the proposed Argentine- American trade treaty have brought objections that any reductions on tariff duties on American merchandise would prejudice Argentine industries, most of which are able to exist solely by virtue of high protective tariffs.

A newly organized Argentine company vigorously protested a proposed reduction in duties on American automobiles.

Supreme Court to Rule Today on Suit Against A. M. A.

The Supreme Court is expected to announce today whether it will pass on the Government's suit charging the American Medical Association with conspiracy to violate the Sherman antitrust law.

The Department of Justice appealed from a decision by the Federal District Court for the District of Columbia holding that physicians did not come under the antitrust law since they were engaged in a profession and not a trade.

The Government charged the medical association, two affiliated societies and a group of individual physicians with conspiring against Group Health Association, Inc., a nonprofit co-operative organization of Government employes in the District of Columbia.

A Supreme Court decision, the Department of Justice said, will "affect the conditions of medical practice throughout the United States."

It added that group health associations were intended to provide "adequate medical care for low-income groups."

Tobacco ...opens Doors to Fields where People Live, Work & Achieve

Today there are about 1,000,000 cigar stores, drug stores, country and grocery stores where you can buy cigarettes in the United States. These retailers, and the jobbers who serve them, have built up a service of courtesy and convenience unmatched by any other industry catering to the American public's pleasure.

THERE ARE ANOTHER MILLION people who are engaged directly or indirectly in the transportation of cigarettes to every town, hamlet and crossroads.

IT IS ESTIMATED that there are 1,602,000 tobacco farmers raising tobacco in 20 out of the 48 states. Good tobacco is one of the hardest crops to raise and bring to market, requiring great skill and patience from seed-bed planting to harvesting and curing. The modern tobacco farmer has done well the job of constantly improving the quality of his product.

THE AVERAGE LENGTH of service of the 13,230 people working in the Chesterfield factories, storage houses, leaf-handling and redrying plants is over 10 years. This means that every step in the making of Chesterfields, regardless of how small, is handled by people who have had 10 years of experience and ability in knowing their jobs.

TRULY TOBACCO OPENS DOORS to fields where people live, work and achieve, and Chesterfield takes pride in its ever increasing part in this great industry that is devoted entirely to the pleasure of the American public.

TO SMOKERS, Chesterfield Cigarettes have always said, and now repeat, that in no other cigarette made can you find the same degree of real mildness and good taste, or the same high quality of properly cured and aged tobaccos. Chesterfield Cigarettes are made with one purpose only . . . to give smokers everywhere the MILDER, BETTER-TASTING SMOKING PLEASURE they want. You can't buy a better cigarette.

Indian Summer Brings Festive Mood to D. C.

Numerous Parties Given as Society Gets in Spirit of Season; William Coads Are Honored by Mrs. Ralph Worthington

By Elizabeth Henney

Washington's Indian summer, which has painted the town's green foliage with splashes of brilliant red and yellow, has also brought a festive mood to the capital, and numerous parties were on yesterday's social calendar.

Welcoming home her son-in-law and daughter on their first wedding anniversary, Mrs. Ralph Worthington entertained yesterday at her town house, 2019 Connecticut avenue, from 4 until 7 o'clock, for Mr. and Mrs. William Coad, whose marriage here last year was one of the outstanding social events of the season.

Receiving with Mrs. Worthington, who was gowned in violet crepe with a corsage of orchids, were Mrs. Coad, in blue wool with orchids; Mrs. Worthington Luke, another daughter, who was gowned in black with an intricate gold costume necklace, and Mrs. Worthington's daughter-in-law, Mrs. Ralph Worthington 3d, who also wore black. For Mrs. Worthington it was a double celebration yesterday, because all of her children were in town and at the party.

Mr. and Mrs. Coad, who arrived here on Saturday afternoon after a week's visit in New York, were feted that evening by Miss Emily Davis at the dinner dance at the Chevy Chase Country Club.

Throughout the house yesterday were masses of chrysanthemums and colorful autumn leaves, brought from Mrs. Worthington's country home on the Potomac, River Farm. The farm, on the Memorial boulevard, has a lovely old Georgian home surrounded by 28 acres. Mrs. Worthington, who is now busily restoring the house, expects to move down there shortly after the Christmas holidays, but will keep her town house open until late spring.

Estate Once Owned By Washington

At the moment, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Worthington 3d, who have been here for the last month from their home in Miami, Fla., are occupying the guest house. This estate, originally owned by George Washington, and a part of the Mount Vernon properties, was named by him River Farm and deeded to one of his nephews.

Mr. and Mrs. Coad, now making their home in Omaha, will be in town until October 30, then will go down to Thomasville, Ga., for a few days' visit to their plantation there before returning to Omaha. They will be back in Washington in February for another extended visit.

Among the guests were Associate Justice of the Supreme Court James C. McReynolds, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Carr, Mrs. Frank Letts, Mrs. Sidney Cloman, Ralph Snowden Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Sullivan, Mrs. George Thorpe, Mrs. George Maurice Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Holdrege, Miss Emily Davis, Harold Fangbone, Robert Webster, of the Legation of the Union of South Africa; Eric Hagner, Randall Hagner, Miss Mary Howry and Miss Elizabeth Howry.

Also there were Hewitt Wells, Mrs. Henry Flood and her daughter, Miss Eleanor Flood; Mr. and Mrs. John W. Davidge, Miss Archibald Davis, Mr. and Mrs. William Culbertson and their daughters, Miss Junia and Miss Jane Culbertson; John Hamilton, James Mitchell, Arthur Vandenberg, jr., Jock Merriam, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem and Miss Ann Meem, Mr. and Mrs. Wade Ellis, Dr. and Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, Dr. and Mrs. Breckenridge Bayne, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, Mrs. McCeney Werlick, Nathan Bartlett, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm McConihe, Mr. and Mrs. William MacCracken and many others.

Mrs. Emlen Davies Gives Party

Not sure that she would be present at her own party, due to the uncertainty of ships these days, Mrs. Emlen Davies went right ahead and planned a birthday supper party yesterday for her daughter, Mrs. Aldace Walker. Fortunately the Conte di Savoia, bringing Mrs. Davies' son-in-law and daughter, M. and Mme. Robert Grosjean, docked early Saturday morning in New York. Mrs. Davies met the boat, all three of them came immediately to Washington and the party went off as scheduled, complete with hostess and guests.

Also entertaining yesterday was Miss Mary Jane Stanley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Stanley. The affair was a cocktail party at the Stanley's home in Laural, and was in honor of Miss Ann Lee Raborg, cousin of Miss Stanley, who is spending the winter with them here. The daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. W. A. Raborg, her home is in Tempe, Ariz. Mrs. Raborg is a sister of Mrs. Stanley. Others entertaining yesterday were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Patterson, who gave a 5 and 7 o'clock party for Count Oleg Cassini, and Capt. and Mrs. John Person, who entertained at supper at their home on Sherrier place.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who will not be able to attend the opening program of the Philadelphia Orchestra tomorrow night because she will be out of town, has announced that she has turned her box over to her friend, Mrs. Henry Morthenthau, who will have a party of guests. Mrs. Morgenthau also is listed as a boxholder for the other concerts of the season, her own box being farther back on the same side of the hall as the White House box.

Mrs. Roberts, president general of the D. A. R., will have a party in her box tomorrow evening and nearly 20 other members of the society that made Constitution Hall possible also have made reservations for this event when Eugene Ormandy will conduct and the guest soloist will be Fritz Kreisler, the world's best-known violinist.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

Dull Moments to Be Absent in Annual Middleburg Hunter Show Next Saturday

THE ANNUAL MIDDLEBURG Hunter Show will be held on Saturday, October 28, at Glenwood Park Race Course, near Middleburg. Beginning at 9:30 a. m. there will not be a dull moment during the day as the 14 classes are run off. There will be hunter classes for all types of hunters; hunt appointment classes; hunt teams and foxhound features from the "Hunt Country."

Mrs. Livingston Hazard, secretary, is getting entries daily, for this will be the largest sporting event of the month in Virginia. Mrs. Amory Perkins is treasurer and James B. Skinner, manager. The committee is arranging many unusual things and working hard to make the show a great sporting occasion. Serving on the committee are Daniel C. Sands and Miss Charlotte H. Noland, joint masters of Middleburg Hunt; Lieut. Col. William H. Clifford, William Hulbert, Harry Whitfield, Oliver Iselin, Frederick Warburg, Stephen Clark, jr., Jack T. Skinner, Crompton Smith, Barryington Hall, Duncan Read, Courtland H. Smith, Arthur White, William Seipp and S. H. Rogers Fred.

AMONG CLASSES seen only at this show, that are entirely different from those seen at other shows will be the half century class—exhiitors to be 50 years old and over, to walk, trot and canter. To be judged for riding and suitability of mount. This brings out many "old timers," and everyone enjoys seeing them ride. Entered in this class is Mrs. Thomas Davis, of Middleburg, formerly Miss Mildred Greble, of Washington, who was disqualified from winning last year because she was three months under age, so when a woman puts her age up to be in this class you may know it is worth winning and going to see! Dr. Thomas Neill, of Washington, is entered, also Miss Charlotte Noland, Dr. Cary Langhorne, Louie Leith and many others.

"The Lady and Gentleman" class portrays a lady and gentleman of any period on horseback. It is said they will have entries from Adam and Eve—though I never heard of them riding horseback—down to the present day, so it will be a large and most interesting class.

"THE HUNT STAFF and Field" class, will be lovely. To consist of the master, his huntsman, and one whipper-in and not more than three members of the "field." Horses must be bona fide property of the hunt and the "field" must be mounted on their own horses. To be shown at a hunting pace outside of ring and to be judged in the ring. Middleburg Hunt and Hounds will be shown but will not compete. There will be numbers of entries from other hunts in Virginia and Maryland.

Two new challenge trophies will be competed for. In the Corinthian class, the "A Geddis Crump Memorial Challenge Cup, presented by Stephen Clark, jr., must be won three times by the same owner to be kept. The late Dr. Crump was a whipper-in of the Middleburg Hunt for years. In the hunt teams, the "Gen. William Mitchell Challenge Bowl" will be given and must also be won three times by the same owner to be kept.

MRS. NORMAN K. TOERGE, of Locust Valley, Long Island, has arrived in Virginia and is staying with Mrs. Hazard. She will be an exhibitor at the Middleburg Hunter Show, when she will ride her horse, Camp, a bay 5-year-old by Swope, by Fair Play, out of Camp Fire. They will make hard competition for Mrs. Toerge has won with Camp, in hunter classes during the seasons 1938-39 15 championships, two reserves and over a hundred blue ribbons, not counting numbers of reds and yellows. The Virginia "gals" are going to try and beat the combination of Mrs. Toerge and Camp, if they possibly can.

Mrs. Charles Amory, of Boston, is spending a week with her daughter, Mrs. Amory Perkins, at her home, Journey's End, Middleburg. Miss Elizabeth Walker, of Washington, was a week-end visitor to Middleburg.

MISS HARRIOT FLEMING, of Washington, spent the week-end with her mother, Mrs. Lee Fleming, at her home near The Plains.

Harry Darlington flew down from New York and landed on his mother's (Mrs. George Garrett) estate, where he spent the week-end and hunted with Orange County Hounds on Saturday.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man 'Well Up in Years' Charges This Column With Being Too Lenient Toward Fallen Women

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I was out of town for some days just after I read your reply of October 12 to "Kay," the girl whose fiance put her on probation after "hearing some things about her past." This explains my delay in challenging your remarks. I have long been a reader of your column and usually agree with the advice you give. I do not always agree, however, but so far have never essayed to put my disagreement into words.

"Kay" wrote to say that she had been engaged to a young Army officer, until he learned from friends that she had been indiscreet with another man. She said her beau had told her he couldn't believe her any more and wanted them not to see each other for six months, during which time she was not to date any other men, etc. Your reply was to the effect that his reaction placed him "under suspicion of being essentially as shabby a character as he accused her of being." With that statement I do not agree.

I am a man well up in years, was married for many years, knew many girls well in my younger years, know a large number now, and try to keep in touch with current trends of modernity. Therefore, I do not believe that I speak as an old fogey who is steeped in ancient manners and mores merely. The greatest fault I have found with your advice to women in the past has been your apparent tendency to look lightly upon more or less flagrant lapses from chastity.

I am well aware that the present generation takes the same viewpoint very largely, and that an increasing number of women of all classes and of all years do not practice chastity and too often look upon their individual defection as perfectly justifiable. While you tell your questioners that such conduct is wrong, it seems to me that your advice to them is tempered by your apparent knowledge that this type of behavior is all too prevalent. Reading between the lines of what you write, it seems to me that you take the attitude that while such women were wrong in yielding, still there were many excuses for it and it should not be held strongly against them.

I will agree that it would not be right to put such women under the ban of ostracism when they fall by the wayside, while letting the men who are equally guilty go unpunished—as was the custom in my young years. But, nevertheless, we have possibly swung to too great extremes of liberality in these days, so that we regard such lapses too leniently, saying to women, in effect, that "while you should not have strayed from the narrow path, we will not hold it against you, now that you have."

In the case of "Kay," one could hardly have taken the position which you took unless you were cognizant of all the facts, and apparently you were not. The implication of your remarks is that "Kay" was right in not telling her beau about her lapse from strict morality. To my mind, this was wrong, per se. It would have been better, in my opinion, had she told her fiance the truth herself rather than have him learn of her escapade from others. The fact that she withheld this information would cause many a man (bad as men may be in your eyes) to wonder whether she might not deceive him in like manner in future.

How was her beau to be assured that she keenly repented her indiscretion and would walk a straight path forever after, making him a devoted wife and trustworthy companion? He may well have been a man with ideals a little higher and more uncompromising than those of the average man, and the fact that he had placed full confidence in his betrothed, whereas she had kept her past concealed from him, may have been a bitter blow. It may be open to debate whether men should take it upon themselves to condemn the woman who has "fallen," when they, themselves, have done like things, but it has ever been thus and probably always will be. Screeds from you will not change man's (perhaps inconsistent) viewpoint, try as you will.

To conclude, I am strongly inclined to believe that "Kay's" beau did the right thing in putting her on probation, as it were. For only by judging her conduct during that period could he be sure that he loves her enough to overlook her frailty and make her his wife. DISAGREEMENT.

Interesting Viewpoint, But Wide of the Mark

DEAR DISAGREEMENT: While your "screed" is interesting as a point of view, it cannot be taken seriously as a purported rebuttal of my dispassionate argument that "Kay" will be acting most wisely in putting the Army officer entirely out of her life. You have failed entirely to concern yourself either with the various ramifications of her specific problem, or with my very careful efforts to determine—on the basis of her recital—whether the man "really loves" her and whether they could find happiness in marriage, even supposing he could be finally induced to "overlook" her adolescent indiscretion (the exact nature of which, by the way, she did not disclose).

You disregard both the essential message as well as the surface content of the whole reply, to concentrate upon one isolated phrase which loses even its relevance to the case when removed from its qualifying setting. This is probably due to the fact that you postponed composition of the critical retort until most of what had been said faded from mind. If you will re-read that article attentively, I think you will find that your supposed conflict with my analysis and conclusions, in this particular instance, cannot be objectively sustained. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Hollywood, Calif.—Mrs. Pat O'Brien improves meat broths by adding cheese balls which are made by beating stiff the whites of 4 eggs, then adding yolks, 4 tablespoons finely grated bread crumbs and 4 of parmesan cheese, and flavoring with salt and nutmeg. It is mixed lightly, dropped into boiling broth, a teaspoonful at a time, and allowed to boil 7 minutes.

Silver Threads Among The Silk

Fabrics shot with silver and gold are especially desirable now as the season's party giving progresses. Silver threads among the gold are scattered all over the silks, satins and taffetas of many of the newest dinner and dance gowns. Dark-eyed Dorothy Nicholson posed for us above in the silver-threaded orchid dinner dress at left and also for the sketch of the blue and gold embroidered taffeta ball gown at right. The latter is sketched from the back to exploit the low-cut winged shoulder line and back bustling fullness. Miss Nicholson modeled both gowns at Saturday's luncheon fashion show at a local hotel

Introducing Dr. Graph

PRESIDENT—Ladies, we are wonderfully honored to have with us today a most distinguished guest. Our speaker is one of the nation's most eminent—most eminent—well I might say one of the nation's most eminent experts in his lines I am sure we have all read and admired him. However, since I am not as familiar with his work as I really ought to be, I shall ask Mrs. McAddle, chairman of the program committee, to introduce Doctor—I mean to introduce our distinguished speaker.

MRS. McADDLE—Madame President, Ladies and Doctor—I mean Gentleman. Our speaker today needs no introduction. You all know as much about him as I do. And since it is getting late and I know you are all eager to get—that is to hear him, I will not take up your time by making a speech.

I do want to say this much, however. This is a time of crisis. It is also a time of transition. And so we are particularly fortunate today in having such an eminent—an eminent—well, such a noted specialist in his field come to us with a message.

I am sure you have all read Doctor—I mean our distinguished speaker's books, articles, pamphlets and the like. There is one of his writings that made a very deep impression on me. It was the one about—about—well, I have forgotten just for the moment what it was about, but it was a masterly discussion of a subject that we should all know more about.

Now I want to say that Doctor—I mean our speaker—is known not only in this country as an eminent—an eminent—well, as an eminent authority on a subject of wide public concern but is, I understand, an eminent international leader in his field. He has traveled in—that is he has traveled widely, and has lectured before audiences of all—well, audiences of all assorted shapes and sizes.

However, I did not intend making a speech. I am no speech maker. I just feel however that such an eminent—er, specialist as Dr. Chaff—oh there I didn't mean to mention his name so soon, but being as I have, well may I say that Dr. Chaff——

DR. GRAPH—GRAPH!

MRS. McADDLE—Oh beg pardon—Graph. Isn't that funny! You know I know that name as well as I do my own. Well anyway, I do feel that at a time when this country is being overrun with so many 'isms it is a wonderful privilege for us to have with us a man who is a so widely known as a——a——

DR. GRAPH—Ethnologist.

MRS. McADDLE—To have a man so widely known as a dermatologist come to us with an enlightening message. Now in introducing Dr. Gaff—

DR. GRAPH—GRAPH!

MRS. McADDLE—Oh, of course, I meant "Graph." Well anyway, as I said before, I'm not here to make a speech, and I know you are all eager to hear our distinguished visitor's inspiring message. Ladies, I have the privilege of introducing at this time a man who is known throughout these United States as a writer, a lecturer, a leader, a champion of womanhood, as one of the world's most celebrated er—as one of the world's most celebrated misogomists—Dr. Ignatius——

DR. GRAPH—Horatius!

MRS. McADDLE—Oh, of course! Dr. Horatius Graft!

Learn Amateur Play Producing

THE REHEARSAL for a play! What fun to get your group together and put on a show. And a grand way to make money for your club.

But will it be a success? Make a profit, bring praise for actors, recognition for the production staff? Yes! Any group can put on a grand show if they know a few professional tricks, how to select a play, plan stage settings, carry on rehearsals.

The first step is to choose a director. He ought to be a good organizer—able to handle people, win their respect. For he is the final authority on every point.

With the co-operation of a play committee, the director decides on a play—one the group is enthusiastic about and for which it can provide suitable actors.

Wise usually to make your first play a farce or melodrama—it's easier to put on—and a good plot, lively action, dramatic climax will hold the interest of your audience.

And for smooth production, the good director enlists the help and talents of everyone available. The man with a knack for carpentry heads the stage crew, is responsible for scenery. The girl who can sew directs the costume crew—everybody does his bit toward a triumphant success!

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "How to Put on a Play," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Halt in Losing Weight After a Few Weeks of Dieting Is Just a Lull

ONCE YOU go on a slimming diet, you lose merrily for a time. You tick off a pound or two each week and it seems surprisingly easy. Why, you think, this is wonderful! It's almost too good to be true! And it is.

Just when everything is going so well, you strike the snags. You do everything like the book says. You diet. You exercise until you are blue in the face. And you don't lose any weight. After awhile it ceases to be funny. You begin to think it is your glands or nature—or that something might be wrong with your diet.

There is nothing wrong with your glands—at least, the chances are 20 to 1 that nothing is. And you cannot inherit fat. If you stick with your diet your luck will change and you will lose again. It may be several weeks before you do. And in spite of a careful caloric restriction you might even gain a little. Now that is almost more than you should be expected to put up with!

You'll Begin to Lose Again

A good many reducers can't carry on during one of these periods. If they can't lose on a diet they think they are entitled to eat as they please, and that really stops their losing. At such a time you should stick to your diet as never before. You will suddenly begin to lose again and you will lose so much all at once that your weekly average will be up where it belongs.

It is hard to explain this lull in losing. After your caloric in-take has been limited for several weeks your system economizes and gets along in fewer calories. It may be merely that you have lost the soft fat. Or, it may be a case of water retention. All three factors might be causing the trouble. The thing to remember is that nothing can stand in your way forever. As long as you count calories your weight reduction is a certainty.

You have to come quite a way with your program before striking a lull. And if you were to give up now, you would probably never try again.

All Reducers Strike Snags

At this stage it might be a very good idea to take all your measurements again. Your measurements can change even though your weight does not. If you are exercising as faithfully as you like to think you are, you should find fractions of inches off here and there. The steady program of exercise gives you better muscle tone and that makes your weight more compact so that you measure slimmer.

Don't lose interest! All good reducers strike these snags sooner or later, but only the ones who go off their diet fail to achieve slimness.

Hoppin' John and Grits, Says Roy Roberts

(Favorite foods of Washington men are featured in this column.)

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor.

No caviar or "a la'a" for Roy Roberts, the assured Yale man in the cast of "Ladies and Gentleman." This winning Irishman is rather a Washingtonian by adoption because of his wide acquaintanceship while playing with the National Theater Players several summers in Washington. He thinks it is "such a friendly city, the most beautiful city in our country, and I found some of my favorite foods without any effort."

MR. ROBERTS

A Southerner—born in Georgia, but later a resident of Tampa, Fla.—he has a hankering for Southern foods which he says he does not find in his travels from coast to coast. He fancies grits very definitely, and confessed he has a similar feeling for black-eyed peas. Both of these he was overjoyed to find in a local cafeteria. When I ask him concerning the way in which he liked his black-eyed peas cooked, he said he didn't have a recipe, but, "they are delicious cooked any way, and you know Hoppin' John is a dish we especially like in the South." The following is a recipe for Hoppin' John.

Hoppin' John

Soak 1 cup peas overnight. The next day cook peas until soft, being careful to keep them whole during the cooking. Cook ¼ pound of pork with the beans, to add flavor. When peas are sufficiently cooked, there should be only a small quantity of liquor left on them. Mix 1 cup cooked rice with peas, and season with salt, pepper and 2 tablespoons butter.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

The Matriarchate Has The Last Word in The New Car Styles

New York, Oct. 22.

WHEN I battled my way into our fortieth annual Automobile Show the other afternoon I was poked fair in the brisket, not by a mess of leaflets, but by an earful of statistics, and they fair floored me, sisters. The man said that over 2,500,000 cars will be sold come 1940 (they hope, they hope) and that of these sales, no less than 25 per cent will be influenced by the ladies.

ALICE HUGHES

Can you believe it? American tradition has always made the family car papa's pride and pick. And now does the worm turn? "I want performance," hollers father. "But I want room and comfort and a beautiful fabric in the upholstery!" snaps mother. And does the mater win, just as she is beginning to do in his suits and haberdashery? If so, the tide of battle sure has turned.

As I looked over the new cars, assisted by sleek young gents with a soothing line of gab, I realized that it is certainly our year in the automobile line. Most of the cars I saw are lower and roomier than those of the past, and the color charts are brighter all along the line. There'll always be plenty of black cars on the road, but I'll bet there'll be fewer next summer than ever in history. And another feminine stunt, picked right out of every-day fashion lingo, is the widespread ensembling of exterior color with the hues of the upholstery. Say, who gets up the new cars—motor geniuses, or Hattie Carnegie.

And the gadgets beat all get out, for 1940. Handy door locks to keep Betty from falling out on her pretty pate. Brightly lighted ignition keyholes for night driving. One car has no clutch pedal, which leaves the left foot free for kicking purposes. The figure sharks at the show say that 7 out of 10 people now want radios in their jobs, and very fine sets of various kinds and prices are built right in.

All in all, the new cars look mighty fine. Not sissy, but swell. And I'll go right on pushing my battered hack, marked "57th Street or Bust!"

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Doesn't it make you happy to know that our believed country is all right for the winter? With Mrs. Harrison (Mona) Williams, the ten best-dressed women in the world, back from her self-imposed exile at Capri, and dear Baba Hutton back again with little Lance—what can hurt us now? Of course, Baba used to like Paris and Benice and London and even Denmark better—but it seems that boom-booms are now heard in those parts, and the worst we can do so far is the tire blow-out. Strange how all the rich exiles come skittering home when the boom-booms begin. . . .

They're digging a big hole here at the edge of Murray Hill, at Forty-second and Park, for the fine new Air Terminal Building, and the kindly contractors have helped the busy New Yorkers who toil all day long watching steam shovels by boring holes in the high board fence around the excavation. Some are about a foot from the sidewalk—no doubt for our fancy dogs with nothing to do. The Rockefellers started this last year with their "Sidewalk Superintendents' Club" when they were digging the hole for a big building in the Center.

Society Leaders Hurry Back to U. S. for Safety

NO ONE here will be shocked if Baba Hutton chooses, as No. 3, the handsome Bob Sweeney, of England, who was on the same lugger. Of course, her shackles will not be dropped from that count until 1941. But Troo Luv can always wait, I wonder. . . .

The two cutest girls to arrive in this town since Annie "Umph" Sheridan, are Mrs. Lauritz Melchior, tiny wife of the huge Wagnerian tenor, and lovely Nina Theilade, Danish dancer of the Ballet Russe. What a cunnin' pair! . . .

D. C. Area Crashes Kill Man, Hurt 10

Alexandrian Flung From Car as It Strikes Pole at Hunting Creek, Va.

One man was killed and at least ten others were injured yesterday in week-end traffic crashes in and near the District.

Elmer Thomas, 23, of Alexandria, was killed when he was flung from an automobile which struck a pole in south Patrick street at Hunting Creek, near Alexandria, while its driver was attempting, police said, to avoid an approaching car. Thomas then was run over by the other automobile.

Sinclair Lewis Completes Novel Portraying Struggles of a Girl to Become an Actress

Noted Author Here; Calls Writer's Life Loneliest in World

Sinclair Lewis, novelist and Nobel Prize winner, took time off from the comics yesterday to announce a newly completed novel and say that "a writer's life is the loneliest in the world."

Curling up on a sofa in his Mayflower Hotel room, the lean, red-headed novelist who added "Babbitt" and "Main Street" to the language, had much to say about what he's been doing, and little to tell of his future plans.

"For the past six months I've been working on this book, and playing stock theater in New England," he said. "No, I don't know where people get the idea I'm giving up writing to go on the stage. You see, the stage is a perfect change for a writer, and writing is a perfect change for an actor."

Written Between Acts

"Bethel Merridy" is the title of the new novel, to be published next March. Lewis described it as a tale of the early career of a girl who wanted to be a great actress.

"I finished writing it in my spare time between flings at this business of being an actor," he said.

Doing two jobs at once fits the restless mood of this writer, who shows no inclination to sit back and consider his achievements. His mind flashes from topic to topic, considering each with the enthusiasm of one who is still learning.

"A writer is stuck away somewhere by himself." He lit another cigarette. "But an actor has a continual intimacy with people. It's a gregarious life, a good change for a writer."

SINCLAIR LEWIS

Declines to Disagree With Anything Said By Wife About War

He leaped to the European situation.

"I'd like to see the Allies win. Everybody would. But I can't set myself up as an authority on the war. There are too many authorities on it already."

He declined to disagree with anything his wife, Dorothy Thompson, the commentator, has said about the war.

Lewis grinned. "She certainly knows what she's talking about—far more than I do in regard to Europe. Besides, she's my wife."

The stage and the war he is interested in, but he always returns to his first love—literature.

Lauds Steinbeck's Work

"I don't know where the American novel is going at the present time," he said, "but it's in the hands of some very brilliant new writers. This man Steinbeck is good. A man you want to watch is Prokosch. Thomas Wolfe showed real promise, and when he died recently I think American literature really lost a great writer."

Lewis is headed for the South. The restlessness that has always kept him traveling, questioning, wondering, has not left him in middle age.

"I don't know where I'm going. Just going South. Want to keep moving."

Citizens Ask V. P. S. to Give Plant Details

Group Challenges Announcement of Power Company

A group of 14 Arlington County and Alexandria citizens last night called upon the Virginia Public Service Co. to make a "much fuller disclosure" of its plans to erect a new $2,000,000 generating plant in Alexandria for supplying the growing power needs of the surrounding area.

In a letter to M. J. O'Connell, president of V. P. S. Co., the citizens asked whether the company "really intended" to build the plant or "is the announcement made merely to forestall questions about the menace of serious interruption of power supply until after the power referendum in Arlington (for a municipal plant) on November 7.

Challenge Cost Estimate

The letter also asked why Virginia Public Service was planning the construction through a different corporation from V. P. S. Co. but having the sameofficers.

The citizens charged that the 15,000 kilowatt capacity plant, estimated by V. P. S. to cost $2,000,000, "need not cost a nickel over $1,500,000."

Signers of the letter included F. A. Silcox, United States chief forester; John Collier, Commissioner of Indian Affairs; Kenneth G. Crawford, Ruby A. Black, Malcolm Ross, William A. F. Stephanson and Herbert Little, of Alexandria; Frank L. Ball, former State Senator; William C. Gloth, former Commonwealth's attorney; A. D. Adams, chairman of executive committee, Arlington County Civic Federation; Julian D. Simpson, secretary of the federation; M. L. Ramsay, director of information and research, Rural Electrification Administration; Emery N. Hosmer and J. B. Lowell, of Arlington County.

A. U. Group's 'Dad's Day' Program Held at Church

Hundreds Hear Rev. William Keese Urge Tolerance and Christian Unity; Advocates Elimination of Racial God

A challenge to pioneers in fields of political democracy, tolerance and Christian unity, "where our forefathers feared to settle," was voiced yesterday morning at Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church, on American University campus, by the Rev. William Andrew Keese.

He spoke at a "Dad's Day" service, sponsored by the Christian Students' Association. Scores of fathers and sons, as well as several hundred others, attended.

Prominent among the guests were Charles E. Richardson, former mayor of Rockville Center, Long Island, and his son, Charles S. Richardson, a freshman student. The elder Richardson's father was the Rev. Edward B. Richardson, who died last May at 81 and who, for many years, was secretary of the New York State Baptist Convention.

The Rev. Mr. Keese said that bigotry and intolerance are products of inferior religion. He gave Methodist unity as an example of "moving up into lands where our fathers were strangers."

Criticizing nations which are "making God a tribal and nationalistic deity, and giving the sanction of religion to what they believe is a holy crusade," he contended that "God has been split up, so that there is a German God, a Polish God, a French God and an English God."

"I don't see how Russia expects to get through this war," he said, "for she has no God," and then asked:

"Have we a God big enough to include all people? Have we that high sense of missions, that broad sympathy for others, that strong faith in God? Only that will enable us to dwell in unsettled regions where our fathers were strangers."

3 Girls issing From Homes in Montgomery Co.

Montgomery County police last night asked police of Washington and Virginia to look for there girls missing from their homes.

Miss Hartig is blond, 5 feet 5½ inches, weighs 115 pounds, with blue eyes. County police were asked to look for the girls by Harry P. Williams, father of Miss Williams.

The other girl, Margie Stubbs, of Kensington, Md., is 17, 5 feet 2 inches, weighs 115 pounds, has dark-brown hair and blue eyes, wears glasses and was clad in a dark skirt, red, plaid jacket, brown oxfords and blue stockings. Baltimore Cleric Talks at Fete of Rockville Church

Young people are not interested in the historical features of their church so much as in what it offers today and tomorrow, the Rev. Kingman A. Handy, of Baltimore, declared yesterday at the 118th anniversary celebration of the Rockville (Md.) Baptist Church. The preacher had delved into the records of the church and presented a resume of its activities since its founding in 1821.

A special musical program was presented, with solos by Miss Lucille Johnson, at the morning service and at a union service with the Rockville Christian, Methodist and Presbyterian churches held at the church last night.

The Rev. Herbert O. Cooper, pastor, preached on the "Living Dead," developing the thought that Christ, who was put to death, still lives and remains a factor in the Nation and the world.

Patients Pay Tribute to Miss Kennedy

Children Sent to Christ Child Health Farm Visit Her For 'Homecoming'

Miss Mary Kennedy was beaming last night. Her feet seemed to have wings as she moved quickly among her charges at the Christ Child Convalescent Home near Rockville, Md.

Miss Kennedy was happy. Her children had come home to pay tribute to the long hours she gave them care in the past ten years. Yesterday was "homecoming" at the farm.

The "children" who came home presented a far different picture from the little unfortunates who were entrusted to the care of Miss Kennedy and her staff as convalescents from Washington clinics and hospitals.

Rosy cheeks and bubbling spirits offered a far more subtle tribute to the home and its staff than the words they managed to bring out.

100 Return to Farm

Approximately 100 former patients were on hand to greet Miss Kennedy, and to romp through the great big house that still expresses the old spirit of hospitality for which it was noted before it became the property of the Christ Child Society ten years ago.

Neighbors who dropped in for the homecoming told repeatedly of the hospitality of the old house—but their tales were topped by Miss Kennedy with a handful of paper charts.

The charts showed the condition of the children when they entered and the increase in weight and other improvements and finally told the story of another little life given a chance to fight the battles of the world.

The work of the 20-acre farm is a culmination of the efforts of Miss Mary Merrick more than half a century ago when, a convalescent herself, she began to make layettes for mothers unable to afford. She interested her family, the neighbors and their friends and the work of the little group started in honor of the Christ Child has spread to 31 cities and 8 convent and college branches throughout the Nation.

Board Members Present

The members of the Christ Child Society pay $1 membership fee and pledge themselves to make one child happy at Christmas.

Associated with Miss Kennedy, who is superintendent, are Miss Mary Donovan, house mother; Miss Mary Wood, recreational director; Miss Beatrice Donovan and Miss Rosalie Kern, nurses. Dr. Joseph Wall is chief consultant; Dr. Robert A. Bier is pediatrician. Dr. Margaret Nicholson also is a member of the medical staff.

Hostesses at the home-coming yesterday were members of the board: Mrs. James A. Emery, chairman of the farm comittee; Mrs. James Galvin, chairman of the clothing committee; Mrs. W. R. Knobloch, Miss Mary Kernan, Mrs. Grace Sheridan, Mrs. Louis F. Peak, Mrs. Virginia O'Hare Mrs. William O'Donnell, Mrs. Arthur McConville, Mrs. James Dudley Morgan, Mrs. C. P. Neill and Dr. Nicholson.

The children presented a play written by Miss Mildred Merrick, sister of the founder, and sang over the telephone to Miss Merrick, the founder, who was at her home in Ellicott City.

Clarendon Pastor Says Goal Of Life Is Christian Character

Rev. Haddaway Declares Present Trend Of Civilization Is Toward War; Asserts Youth Must Be Taught to Seek Attainment

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, Clarendon, Va. Tel. OXford 0509.

The Rev. K. K. Haddaway, pastor of Mount Olivet Methodist Church at Clarendon, preached yesterday on "The Attainment of Christian Character."

"Character is the supreme attainment of life," he said in part. "It is the goal of life. The goal of life is eternal life itself. Now, character as it is developed in this modern age is an effect, the result of all our activities. Everything that we do affects us.

"Since most of our activities are along industrialistic and materialistic lines, and since in our modern setup our striving is to make a living, the effect is material, not spiritual. This life, here and now, is the end, not the next life, eternal life. We do not think of spiritual means here in this life which alone make for the spiritual goal which is fully realized at the end of life.

"The Christian ideal is the attainment of Christian character," the Rev. Mr. Haddaway said. "This is to be found in the life of Jesus Christ. Jesus chose spiritual goals, not the emoluments that a temporal world has to offer. We must follow Him. Christian education, which begins with the young, is to develop Christian character after the likeness of Christ.

"We must begin with the child and with youth, which, in the habit-forming time of life, develops traits, characteristics and habits which comprise character. There is a time of emotional arrestment, of life romancing, and it is then that we must give them Christ.

"The hope of the world lies at this point," he added. "Economic ideals, nationalistic ideals, racial ideals, at best are cultural and are not in the highest sense religious. Even the moral and ethical in cultural development is not the highest moral and ethical culture from the religious standpoint.

"Religious morals and ethics must be of Jesus, and these make for Christian character. The present working of civilization leads indubitably in the direction of war and catastrophe. We must make our modern life Christian if our world is to be saved for future generations and if life in time and beyond time is to be eternal."

50,000 Toilers In Maryland Due for Raise

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 20.—Some 50,000 Maryland workers will wake up Tuesday to pay raises or shorter working days, Gov. O'Conor said today.

The Governor said Harold D. Jacobs, deputy administrator of the Federal wages and hours division, had advised him that number would be affected by the second year's operation of the fair labor standards act.

The statute provides that after October 24, 1939, all persons employed in interstate commerce must be paid not less than 30 cents an hour and must be paid time and a half for all overtime in excess of 42 hours weekly.

Jacobs told O'Conor that 36,200 Maryland workers are now employed more than 42 hours weekly and must be paid a bonus or have their work-week reduced. Fourteen thousand others are receiving less than 30 cents hourly, Jacobs noted.

The picture nationally shows some 690,000 workers paid less than the 30-cent standard prescribed by the act, with some 2,362,500 working more than 42 hours weekly, Jacobs said.

Gov. O'Conor And Wife Attend Church Service

Prince Frederick, Md., Oct. 22 (AP). Approximately 500 worshippers, led by Gov. and Mrs. Herbert R. O'Conor, attended dedicatory services today at St. Vianney Cure of Ars Catholic Church here.

Archbishop Michael J. Curley, of Baltimore, was in the sanctuary. The high mass was celebrated by the Rev. Maurice B. Alexander, pastor of St. Vianney's. The sermon was delivered by the Rev. Ignatius Smith, O. P., of Washington.

The cornerstone of the church was laid September 22, 1937. The name was derived from that of St. John Mary Baptist Vianney, who spent his life in a small French parish where he is said to have "wrestled with the devil in many forms."

St. Vianney's is in the center of Prince Frederick.

Peter Fritz Arrested on Beer Charge

Zoning Controversy Center Is Accused Of Selling Beverage Without a License

Charges of selling beer without a license were placed yesterday against Peter Fritz, current storm center of the Montgomery County, Md., zoning controversy, by Montgomery police.

Chief of Police Charles M. Orme and Sergt. Earl H. Burdine, commanding the Silver Spring substation, swore out a warrant before Committing Magistrate J. Kelly Magee at Silver Spring early yesterday.

Released on $500 Bond

Fritz was released on bond of $500 for his appearance tomorrow at 10 a. m. before Trial Magistrate Ralph G. Shure in Silver Spring police court.

Public hearing on a petition filed by Fritz for rezoning the property from residential to commercial is scheduled for 7:30 p. m. Thursday at the Liquor Control Board building in Silver Spring before the Montgomery County Commissioners and the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Civic Groups Oppose Change

The Montgomery County Civic Federation, the Greater Kensington Civic League and nearly all civic groups of the county are protesting the rezoning. Most of the civic groups have authorized delegations to appear.

Fritz, in 1934, constructed a log cabin which he later converted into a restaurant and beer parlor. On August 13, 1937, Fritz was arrested on a warrant alleging violation of the zoning laws. A short time later his attorneys sought to restrain the county commissioners and their employes from interfering with his business pending settlement of a suit filed on his behalf attacking the unconstitutionality of the zoning law. The suits and warrant were withdrawn.

His application for renewal of a beer and light wine license was refused in April, 1937, because his property was held to be residential.

MAN, OH MAN!

By I. A.

The radio amazes us no end.

We mean like one of our broadcasting stations calling in a speaker from Europe.

The announcer's voice travels across 3,000 miles of water.

Then the voice from the other side of the big pond responds.

And before you can even bat an eye the two voices have traveled over 6,000 miles.

That's even faster than fast.

We know that scientists can explain the phenomenon of how the sound of voice travels so speedily.

Or why a particular station always comes in at the same number on your radio.

Or why the other waves don't sometimes get mixed up and give you W. R. C. on the W. J. S. V. dial.

But it still puzzles us.

It's a magical invention, all right.

And so is the exclusive magical finish of Society Brand's famous Hudder Topcoat a boon to mankind.

First of all, Kid mohair, alpaca and fine wool are blended together to make the Hudder windproof, coldproof and wrinkleproof.

And then, a magical secret finish, known only to Society Brand's scientists, adds to the luxurious appearance and texture of this garment . . . making it rainproof and weatherproof.

It's amazingly warm, surprisingly lightweight.

This Is Red-Letter Week In Washington Theaters

Many Stars and Policy Changes on Way; Earle Roxyettes Bowing Out for Vacation; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

FOR THOSE who keep theatrical diaries, this week in the Capital should be recorded in red ink. Not that there will be any deficit in entertainment, but rather because there will be considerably more than usual, plus innovations in policy at at least two of the downtown first-run picture houses.

BELL

It is no secret by now that Thursday will bring Eddie Cantor and his company of radio singers, jesters and specialists to the stage at Loew's Capitol for the first time in too many seasons and that the following day the Earle will break out a stage bill headed by Jack Haley, Mary Carlisle and Jack Teagarden and his orchestra, all in person, to duplicate that earlier three-star combination comprised of Betty Grable, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson and Frankie Master's band.

In the meantime, "Very Warm For May," the first musical comedy in seven years by Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein 2d, will be holding forth at the National under the managerial guidance of Max Gordon. That is worth a red-ink entry all by itself.

As for those innovations in policy, they will occur simultaneously at Loew's Capitol and Palace theaters, where Thursday hereafter will be the opening day for new attractions instead of the Friday that has been more or less customary heretofore. This splitting the week practically in its middle no doubt possesses virtues and advantages that are not immediately perceptible to the lay eye. It is a question that lends itself to endless discussion.

I recall a time back in the old days of the silent cinema when Sunday was the universal opening day for all of the downtown and neighborhood "picture palaces," that was heavy with argument for days on end when it was proposed to transfer the cinema's weekly inaugural to Saturday. It seemed to some of us to make no difference whether Saturday was the first day of the screen week or the last, a picture was still a first-run until you had seen it; if Saturday was the only day the potential customer could go to the "movies," what difference did it make to him whether it was the first day or the last of the picture's run?

In practice, it seemed to make a very great difference, indeed—a difference of between $1,000 and $2,000 in the picture's gross receipts, and on the credit side of the ledger. Why, I don't know, but there it was. Friday openings were even better. Still I do not pretend to know why. Perhaps Thursdays add another thousand or so to the week's "take" at the box office. They seem to think it does on Broadway and we soon shall find out about F street.

At any rate, a great many Washingtonians will find it necessary to revise their theatergoing habits—along with the drama desks, who have thought for a long time now that Thursday was tough enough as it was.

Those 16 Earle Roxyettes ought to feel a little puffed up this week. The announcement at each performance that this will be their last week on Thirteenth street is greeted with sullen silence by those packing the theater to see Frank Capra's "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" and Harry Anger's brief stage revue. The later hint that they are merely going on a well-earned vacation and will be back in six weeks arouses a storm of applause. The Roxyettes have proved one of the most versatile and most popular stage units in the Capital's theatrical annals during their year of diversified effort at the Earle. They have changed their pace and their style so many times—without ever any sacrifice of the extraordinary precision of their work—that they never have come even close to being monotonous or a mere "fill-in" on the bill. They must be prodigious workers to have accomplished all that they have. Prodigious workers are entitled to a vacation now and again. I hope they have as much fun as they have afforded those of us who sit out front and watch them.

Besides her writing for Theater Arts, Miss Gilder is noted for her editing and annotating of books on the theater, including John Gielgud's interpretation of his own "Hamlet." She also is in the Social Register.

It has long been the contention of those "in the know" that Dr. Frank T. Shyne, the Capital's eminent drugless therapist, should be recognized as one of the most important theatrical figures in Washington. Last week, it now leaks out, Frank Capra and two of his associates, Dick Powell, who trained into town Thursday with a fever and a nice start on a siege of laryngitis, and Ann Rutherford, who flew in with more than a touch of the same, managed to keep all of their numerous high-pressure engagements only because of the healing lights that Shyne and the magic of his remedial hands. Come to think of it, we don't feel so well ourself!

Determined to make their tenth anniversary season the best of them all, the Pierce Hall Players will make their initial plunge into 1939-1940 activities on Wednesday night of this week with George Kelly's comedy of "The Show Off." The play will be repeated Thursday night, both performances to be in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets northwest. Constance Kramer, daughter of the late Dr. Stephen E. Kramer, former assistant superintendent of schools, has joined the Pierce Hall group in the capacity of assistant to Director Howard F. Wentworth. Robert Truitt Miller will be seen in the title role of "The Show Off," with Ellen G. Scholze opposite and Carolyn Rogers in the chief feminine character part.

The Children's Theater of New York will inaugurate its series of six productions in the Capital this year with "Dick Whittington and His Cat," in the National Theater this Saturday morning, October 28. The play has not been presented here since its single performance by the same organization five years ago.

The Players Club of Central Community Center will hold public tryouts tomorrow and Wednesday evenings at 8 o'clock at Central High School, Thirteenth and Clifton streets northwest. The play to be cast is Owen Davis' "The Ninth Guest." It will be given a public performance in Roosevelt High School auditorium on December 6.

How many days did you say until Christmas?

Looks a Little Furious, but Not Too Fast!

FRANCHOT TONE, ANN SOTHERN AND ALLYN JOSELYN foreground figures at right, in the usual direction, as they appear in a scene from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "Fast and Furious," opening on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater on Thursday of this week. The new opening day for incoming attractions will be permanent at both the Capitol and Palace

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Oct. 22.

DRAMA DEPARTMENT: When Clare Boothe's new play, "Margin for Error," opened in Princeton, Prof. Albert Einstein was in the audience . . . Einstein, unaccustomed to the pace and flip cracks which feature a Clare Boothe show, was somewhat confused by the fast New Yorky talk and couldn't quite understand what was being said . . . In one of the scenes a member of the cast yells: "Yeah? Well, we got Einstein" . . . The distinguished professor heard his name mentioned and immediately showed his reaction to this phrase which at last he could grasp . . . He indicated this by rising—and taking a bow.

FOREIGN DISPATCH: Repatriated Americans who returned from Paris last week have brought this piece of news, which was censored from the dispatches . . . In the recent roundup of people suspected of Communist sympathies, among those arrested—and still in jail there—is Louis Aragon, one of France's most distinguished writers.

TRAVEL DEPARTMENT: Friday night Attorney General Frank Murphy came to New York, went to a hotel room and then had to keep an appointment in Somerville, N. J. Murphy was accompanied by two men, who learned that he needed a car for the trip. Each went to a telephone to call for a car . . . The first one called the New York police—who vie with the G-men in racing to the capture of any criminal wanted by both departments . . . At the same time the second man phoned the G-men, asking for a car . . . The Attorney General used the car which arrived first—by exactly 3 minutes 20 seconds . . . It was the G-men's car.

BOOK DEPARTMENT: Newman Levy, the lawyer-writer, is treasuring a letter he received from the late Justice Cardozo, acknowledging receipt of Levy's book, wherein the author had rhymed "Bozo" with "Cardozo" . . . In autographing the book, Levy asked to be forgiven for having used Cardozo's name in this way . . . The jurist assured him that no apology was necessary. "On the contrary, I am sure," he wrote, "that your use of my name in a rhyme will give me immortality—for a short time."

FINANCE DEPARTMENT: Before the C. B. S. broadcast from Europe last night, Bill Henry, in France, and Ed Murrow, in London, held a three-way conversation with their New York office . . . "I've been a newspaperman a long, long time," Henry complained, "but this violates all the principles instilled in me" . . . "What's the matter?" asked Murrow. "What principles? What happened?" . . . "I'm in the front lines, where there's nothing to buy," Henry informed, "so I can't hand in any expense accounts!"

PERSONAL: Walter Winchell—You claim the news beat on the commutation of sentence awarded to Warren K. Billings and announced that you broke the story in May . . . On May 15 you wrote: "Gov. Olson of California will pardon Tom Mooney's partner (Warren K. Billings) in about six weeks. Olson never pardoned Billings in six weeks—or ever after. When Billings was released October 17, Olson told him, according to the New York Times, "I wish it were a pardon instead of a commutation" . . . If you think there's no difference between a pardon and a commutation—don't walk—run to the nearest dictionary. (See also "in-ac'cu-ra-cy.")

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT: Except for the proofreaders, probably only one man in Washington reads the Congressional Record every day . . . He's the retired Justice Louis D. Brandeis.

LOCAL NEWS: Before Congressman Jim Fay took his seat among the new leaders of Tammany Hall he conferred with Christopher Sullivan, the Tammany chief . . . "Before I sit down, Christy," said Fay, "I want to know one thing—are you with the President 100 per cent?" . . . Sullivan assured him that the Tammany delegation would back Roosevelt . . . "I hear that one man will refuse," Fay declared . . . "It'll be 100 per cent," Sullivan assured him. "If any man refuses to go along, I promise you—for the first time in my life I'll caucus the Tammany delegation."

SOCIAL NOTES: The elegant Gargoyle Club in London has just reopened for the new season, and the management sent formal announcements to all the New York customers . . . In large type, engraved in the right-hand corner, is the cozy little note of attraction: "Air Raid Shelter Is Available."

Latest Films Of War Head Trans-Lux Bill

Surrender of Warsaw Shown With Much Of American Interest

The news section of the current bill at the Trans-Lux Theater brings to the screen the best coverage so far of the conflict in Europe. This war news is topped by the first and uncensored pictures of the actual fall and surrender of Warsaw, capital of Poland. The commanding generals of the Nazi and Polish armies meet in a railroad coach reminiscent of the signing of the Armistice in 1918.

The scene shifts to the Western Front as you travel with the French poilus invading German soil. War on and above the high seas is extensively covered with a complete analysis of the British and Nazi sea and air strength. More activity in the air and on the sea is recorded off the Pacific Coast, as America parades its might in anticipation of Navy Day, October 27. Land scenes show the speeding up of Navy recruiting. Again to the air go the planes of the newly created United States Neutrality Patrol, plus the testing of the world's greatest flying fortress, the latest United States bomber, of which 13 are ordered by the Army.

On the Home Front

Army troops are shown shoving off for Puerto Rico aboard the Army transport St. Mihiel. Warren K. Billings is freed in California after serving 22 years of a life sentence, and, at the World's Fair, the Texas square dancers compete with the jitterbugs. Fur fashions vie with the autos for 1940—Lew Lehr shakes the rafters with his nonsense and the football pictures, both college and professional, are A-No. 1.

"Trailing the Jaguar" takes you for a 30-minute trip into the jungles of Mexico, with two intrepid American hunters, using the lowly bow-and-arrow as their only weapon. "Mickey's Parrot" brings down the house as Disney again goes to town with an excellent cartoon.

Gayety

With a marked accent on beautiful girls and tuneful musical numbers, the current bill at the Gayety Theater features dynamic Georgia Sothern, one of the fastest and most stunning dancers in burlesque. Always a real favorite here, Miss Sothern, in this production, offers a new cycle of songs and dances, executed in her own inimitable style. Insofar as her dancing is concerned, Georgia is in a class by herself.

Slats Taylor, a newcomer here, along with Al Weber and Charles Taye, combine their efforts in producing some amusing, original and effective comedy numbers. Taylor, in particular, offers a brand of humor that is different from what we often hear and see at this house. Ermaine Parker proves invaluable to the many skits in which she appears, as well as in several enchanting beauty parades. Charlie Schultz, one of the circuit's veteran straight men, gives his usual good performance in this production.

Betty Smith, recently graduated from the ranks of the chorus, upholds the distaff portion of the bill with some musical specialties that are accomplished in a manner that leaves no doubt of her capabilities as a featured artiste.

Among the highlights on the bill is the dancing of Stark and Dorne and some unusually clever whistling by two young chaps who are not programmed. Their "Poet and Peasant" and "My Hero" are among the best things on the bill.

Vickie McNeely and Dudley Doughlas handle their singing roles in capable fashion, while the "ladies of the ensemble" offer several colorful routings, including a lavish, patriotic grand finale.

Atlas

Kay Hamilton (Miss Swing Herself) heads the new stage bill at the Atlas Theater through tomorrow. Miss Hamilton scored in a large way yesterday in a jam session of songs, sung in a rousing and distinctly individual way.

The Moore Twins, hokum comedy artists, supplied the comedy wallop of the program to the delight of a capacity house at the matinee performance.

The surprise act of the bill, Jack Bonnell, Boris Bay & Co., a European novelty number, stole the show. Their offering is different and well deserved the many encores they received.

On the screen, Spencer Tracy, Nancy Kelly and Richard Greene, in "Stanley and Livingstone," an I "Blondie Takes a Vacation," yesterday completed an entertaining treat for the whole family.

Powell Coiffure

Eleanor Powell is introducing a new coiffure in her glamour girl role for "Broadway Melody of 1940," in which she co-stars with Fred Astaire. The coffiure requires long hair, done up. It features a center part, pompadour rolls on either side. There is an interesting coil of hair at the nape of the neck. Eleanor has named this latest hair-do "The Beguine."

Columbia

Friday, at the Columbia, "The Women" entered that select list of films to enjoy a four-week run on F street.

There remains little to say about the screen version of Clare Booth's remarkable stage success. Norma Shearer has a role that shows her to much advantage as the sheep caught among Miss Booth's wolves. John Crawford, Mary Boland, Paulette Goddard and Joan Fontaine are amusingly successful in their caricatures of a quartet of our betters, and Rosalind Russell's extravagant miming of The Worst Cat of Them All has won her ardent admirers.

The film has a more human touch than the play, with a marked emphasis upon the tragedy of a child whose parents are divorced. Anita Loos and Jane Murfin made the adaptation a sprightly one. The only arid stretch in their film is a brief Technicolored fashion show.

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Oct. 22 (INS).—Freddie Bartholomew, the youthful English actor who has had so many legal heartaches, is going on the stage. Rowland Leigh, the Hollywood scenario writer and a great friend of both Freddie and his Aunt Millicent, has formed a producing partnership with John Stein, formerly Texas Guinan's manager. They have already bought Philip Barry's play, "The Boy David," for the young man and rehearsals are starting immediately.

LOUELLA PARSONS

This isn't one of those indefinite, in the future things. The play will open in Chicago within a short time. Later it will go into New York and possibly on the road. Not in a long time has there been such a market for Hollywood stars to appear in the theater. The customers want to see them in the flesh and from all the contracts being signed it looks as if the fans will get their wish.

So many rumors have been printed about why Bette Davis and Warners are again battling that I wired Bette for her version. Here is her reply: "I am trying to arrange my contract with Warners so that I will not work as hard as I have been. I find it impossible physically to live up to such a rigid contract. Am having a really restful vacation and feeling much better. Have gained 10 pounds. Thank you for your interest. (signed) Bette." This telegram only bears out what we said, that Bette didn't have the physical endurance to make four pictures a year. She is entirely satisfied with her stories, as she should be since "Dark Victory" and "Elizabeth and Essex" are being mentioned as Academy possibilities, but she must have more time to rest.

Didn't take a Solomon to recognize that Helen Gilbert was star material after she played in "Andy Hardy Gets Spring Fever." Now Helen goes into Winfield Sheehan's picture, "Florian," which starts in two weeks with Robert Young as her screen hero. The story dates back to the days of Emperor Franz Joseph—the good old days of Austria, before Hitlerism and world wars. She plays the emperor's niece, while Bob is the head of the royal stables, which house the famous Lizzipan horses. The five Lizzipans, owned by Mrs. Sheehan (Maria Jeritza) are the only ones in this country and will figure in the picture, to be directed by Ed Marin.

Hedy Lamarr called me up to invite me to come to see Jamie who she says is the cutest, prettiest baby she has ever seen. I tried to talk with her about her movie troubles and her battle with Metro, but Hedy says she doesn't care about anything now except the baby, Gene and the new home in Benedict Canyon. But Hedy's agents care, and I am told that negotiations are on hot and heavy for a musical play in New York based on a well-known book. So far, the situation between M-G-M and Hedy is in status quo, with neither moving an inch. She wants more money and says her present contract was broken by them. This they deny.

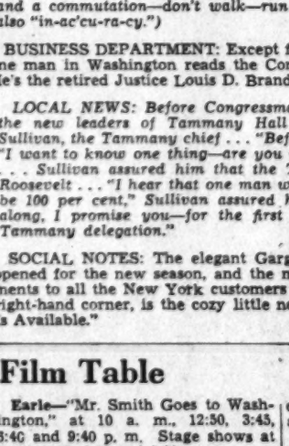
Chatter in Hollywood: The Freddie Marches have shaken the dust of Hollywood from their feet and are not returning. The beautiful March home in Beverly has been sold to Mr. and Mrs. Shirley Burden. Freddie always has liked the stage better than the screen and his success in "The American Way" is probably responsible for his taking the big step. Mrs. March, who is Florence Eldridge, well-known stage actress, never clicked as big as her famous hubby on the screen, so maybe she was a factor in persuading Freddie that his future is on Broadway and not in Hollywood.

A line or two: The offer Isa Miranda received from Berlin to make films in South America for a German company is food for thought. Evidently Germany is planning to make movies there and get a slice of the rich South American film market. Isa turned down the offer . . . The war has played havoc with Hollywood's hair and wig supplies. Most of the long tresses used for wigs came from Czecho-Slovakia and the Balkans, where women grew their hair long specially to sell it . . . The bright boys who thought up that gag of printing any information you want, in newspaper headline style, are cleaning up with customers on Hollywood boulevard. They'll "headline" anything from "Hedy Lamarr Elopes with Joe Doakes" to "Movie Extra Replaces Vivien Leigh in 'Gone With the Wind.'" Even the stars have fallen for the gag of sending out phony news about themselves.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Dan Topping is reported to have settled $1,000,000 on Arline Judge; the Kay Johnson-John Cromwell baby first chronicled in this column, arrives in January; Nancy Kelly leaves for New York next month to join her heart, Edmund O'Brien, and have a holiday in the big town; Lee Bowman and Mrs. Jaime Del Valle, socialite divorcee, an attractive pair at the Sports Circle.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Haremesque



PATSY BEDELL, first seen with Jack Benny in "Man About Town," and expected by Paramount to become a figure on the screen. Isn't she already?

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Oct. 22.—Not true the report that Fernand Gravet was injured in battle while fighting with the French. Fernand's married to a Frenchwoman all right, Mmle. Renaurd, but he's a Belgian and the last I heard, little Belgium was still neutral! When his native land was invaded at the outbreak of the last war Gravet was one of the children sent and kept in England for its duration. While there he learned to speak English and French—therefore most people assume he's French. While we're still over there we might just as well get Danielle Darrieux's situation straightened out. Danielle won't come back while her husband is serving as a pilot in the French air force. And I admire her tremendously for her attitude just as you must. In the first place she doesn't want to leave him, in the second place he wouldn't let her. And when peace does bless the world again her first job here will be at Universal because they have a contract with her.

HOPPER

Merle Oberon's case is different. The English tell me they'd have much more respect if she'd followed the example set by little Danielle. But no, Merle had to rush back for her career. She was so distressed, poor darling, because she failed to get passage on three boats before they finally found a little nook for her Atlantic crossing. Alexander Korda is staying there to do propaganda pictures and Merle's countrywomen feel that pictures have been very good to her. It's none of their business, but they didn't like her running out on her country—or husband. For his work, Korda will probably be knighted, giving Merle the title of "Lady," which she's done so little to earn!

Speaking of royalty I wonder why Hollywood remains so royally-razzled—why kings and queens of the cinema continue calling Mrs. Doug Fairbanks, Lady Ashley, when actually she was a Lady only when married to a Lord and for the Lord's sake Fairbanks is just plain Doug to everyone . . . Which recalls the time Lord Louis Sterling, the tycoon of England's picture industry, was given a testimonal dinner shortly after being knighted. He received hundreds of wires but the one he adored was a message from his young daughter: "Dear Daddy," it read, "thanks for making a Lady out of mother!"

Being in a chatty, not to be confused with catty, mood—I wonder if you know the real reason for the Conrad Nagel-Sidney Franklin change of wives? They were intimate friends, the foursome, so when the Franklins started quarreling, you know how friends are—Ann went to Mrs. Nagel and tried to patch things up. She did a fine job of it, too, because Ruth became Mrs. Franklin. But the first Mrs. Franklin didn't mind; she became Mrs. Nelson Eddy. Now it seems the Nelson Eddys' path of true love has hit a few sour notes! Having been a bachelor for so long, Nelson is pretty demanding about running his own show and now they're building an enormous house in Brentwood (don't tell me it's small—I've SEEN it) he's overworking frightfully to pay for it quickly. I don't believe any voice can stand the strain of singing for the screen, radio and concert stage simultaneously. While we like Nelson, always have, he's just as human as the rest of us. Anyway, his voice is taking too much punishment and though there's been no open break, there have been rumbles in the Eddy household and don't let anyone tell you differently.

Giants Beat Bears; Redskins Whip Pirates, 21-14

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Pittsburgh, Oct. 22.—The box seat occupied by Art Rooney at the Redskins-Pirates game today was not unlike thousands of other box seats in Forbes Field except in one particular. Mr. Rooney's seat for the afternoon cost him $5,000 in contrast to the other 50-yard line seats which retailed at $3.30.

POVICH

"That is what it is costing me to see this ball game today—eight grand," said Mr. Rooney in a visit to the press box between the halves. "That makes me the best fan in Pittsburgh."

It is currently Mr. Rooney's misfortune to own the Pittsburgh club in the National Football League. The Pirates are not a money-making club. If Mr. Rooney could come close to breaking even on the season, he would be a very happy gent. But the year's play is apt to cost him $25,000. You see, his Pirates have lost six straight games; in fact they haven't won a game in the league since October, 1938, and consequently are drawing no profitable crowds.

We'll have about a $4,500 gate today," Rooney was saying and that means a good rap for me. "It costs me $5,000 a week in salaries to put my club on the field, and on top of that I have to guarantee the visiting team $3,000 whether I have $2 or $20,000 in the house. Add the park expenses to that nut and it's easy to figure that I'm not getting rich with my football team."

It is a league rule demanding that the home club pay the visiting team a $5,000 guarantee that Rooney blames for his financial troubles and the stocky young Irishman is going to make an issue of it in the league councils, he declares.

It Isn't Fair for Poor Clubs, Wails Mr. Rooney

"That's a rule that ought to be legislated out of the league," said Rooney. "It isn't fair to a clubowner whose team is going bad. Why should a poor club like mine guarantee the rich clubs in this league $5,000 when it's doubtful if we can draw that much? The other clubs are in this league as deep as we are and if we have a poor club that isn't drawing they shouldn't milk us of the money we could spend to build up the team and draw bigger crowds all around.

"It takes money to build up a good football team just as it does a baseball club. The Yankees run away with the American League pennants because the league is unbalanced—the poor clubs can't afford to buy high-priced players. The same thing is happening in the football league. The poorer clubs don't have the dough to pay big stars big salaries and meet other expenses, and the league is getting unbalanced."

Rooney last season attempted to have the $5,000 guarantee waived but he could muster only six votes among the clubowners. In favor of his plan were the Philadelphia club and both clubs in New York and Chicago, and the Washington Redskins. He hopes to win more converts.

"Anybody should understand that they should cut out that guarantee business for the general good of the league," said Rooney. "Why teams like Cleveland and Detroit and Brooklyn insist on it, I'll never know."

Owner Could Get $125,000 for Pirate Club

They might be insisting on it, of course, to create an obligation on the part of the home club and spur certain clubowners to improving their teams. With no guarantee to pay, a clubowner with a poor team, may have less incentive to improve his own condition at home and be satisfied with the percentages he derives from games on the road.

Despite his losses of the last two seasons, Rooney isn't exactly a penniless fellow. Any time he wants to sell his Pittsburgh franchise he can get $125,000 for the club, he says. "But I don't want to sell. Pro football will come back in Pittsburgh and when it does I want to own the Pirates. I grew up in this town and I love football enough to hang on to the Pirates.

Rooney is the same young Irishman who, a few years ago, staggered the Saratoga bookmakers with his spectacular plunging that netted him $200,000 during one summer meeting. He doesn't have that sort of heavy dough now; in fact, he no longer plays the races and on occasions sermonizes against it.

"I didn't like that reputation I got as a race-track plunger," said Rooney. "I was just but that summer to have a little fun with the horses and wound up winning a fortune. When they tabbed me as a gambler, they tabbed me wrong. I'm not. There's a rule in the National Football League that any player, coach or clubowner caught betting on a league game must be thrown out of the league. I'm the fellow who is responsible for that rule."

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Oct. 22.—Some views behind the football news. We think someone should endorse a campaign to make Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, play on his school's football team.

CONSIDINE

The only possible deterrent is that Hutchins is a pro, having authored a magazine piece on 10-cent football last year. Some concession might be made in his case, however, if only forcibly to indicate to him the whimsical dafiness of making a 10-cent team go through with a bone-buckling $10 schedule.

For when Prexy Hutchins insisted a year ago that his coach, Clark Shaughnessy, use only scholars for players he forgot to deflate the schedule at the same time. The maroon, which should be changed to the black and blue or lily-white, must go through a grueling season against clubs which out-man them to sinister proportions. Harvard and Michigan have crashed 146 points through the Chicago defenses last two Saturdays. The Hutchins A. C. scored no points.

The appalling inconsistency of deliberately weakening a team, to make "honest," and then tossing those unarmed scholars to the wolves of high pressure competition, should be apparent now to the most absent-minded adviser to the boy prexy.

Would Put Dr. Hutchins In at Tackle

The college football business prides itself on its high-mindedness, but the blunt truth is that if any rascal promoter in prize fighting tried to get away with matching a weakened welterweight against a tough young heavyweight he would be run out by his fellow scoundels as a desecrator of the game's ethics.

We would put Dr. Hutchins somewhere up in the Chicago line—probably at right tackle. He'd probably come off the field on a shutter a changed man, particularly if such Michigan huskies as Hercules Renda, Ed Czak, Eave Strong, and Tornado Tom Harmon ran over him.

As long as Hutchins has dropped his team out of the Big Ten, spirituslly, he should go the rest of the way and drop out physically.

Lehigh, whose coach last week bemoaned the presence of gentlemen on his team, came through with a nice 22-0 victory over Buffalo—indicating that he has successfully routed seemliness from his squad. Princeton looked like it had come up with a bully boy or two, too, against Columbia. The Tigers appeared to be fat and dull the week before against Cornell—but maybe that was because Cornell is good enough to make a lot of them look that way this year.

There were three plays worth reviewing. "Abandoned Bill" Decorrevent finally got loose against Wisconsin—and all his pent-up furies of brilliance were unleashed. For 54 thrilling yards he gyrated through the grouping Badgers. He touched the ball in the end zone, looked up with a happy smile, and saw the officials calling him back. He ran the ball 10 more times during the game for a 3-yard gain.

Tennessee Appears Cream of College Elevens

Yale pulled a kind of Roy Riegals. Trying to "freeze" the leather bag in the closing moments of a thrilling game, Yale reserves ran the wrong way, flopped down in their own end zone and gave up a time-wasting safety. But the day's greatest piece of conservatism came in Michigan's slaughter of the Chicago innocents. With the score something like 65-0 in the third period, Harmon kicked a field goal.

It doesn't make much perspicacity to see that the best football club in the country is Tennessee. With a crop of the best backs in the amateur business, Maj. Neyland has produced a line which held the Crimson Tide to one legitimate first down. Alabama's backs, the best that money can buy, gained only 61 yards and were dumped for losses amounting to 40 yards. The volunteers will be the Yanks of the Rose Bowl world series January 1.

Notre Dame as usual pulled its punches against Navy, playing just well enough to win and bad enough to forestall any Congressional indignation which might possibly lead to the dropping of the Irish from the Midshipman schedule.

Manhattan and N. Y. U. turned in remarkable jobs in winning from Auburn and Carnegie Tech, but the principal hysteria of the day must have been at Pittsburgh where the deathless Dukes of Duquesne rose up from an abysmal 0-13 deficit to lick the surprisingly good Pitt team.

New York, Oct. 22.—The famed offensive of the Chicago Bears turned out to be just a merry-go-round for three periods today, giving the New York Giants time enough to whip the big bad boys from the West, 16 to 13, in a wild national professional football league tilt.

Before a packed house of 58,963—second largest crowd ever to see a National League game—the Bear attack got nowhere until the fourth quarter. Meantime, the Giants capitalized on all but two of their scoring chances and rode to victory on the talented toe of Ward Cuff, who booted three field goals, and a savage second period touchdown play.

Miss Six Opportunities

After missing six scoring opportunities inside the Giants' 27-yard line—once being held for downs on the 1-foot marker—the Bears finally began moving in the fading minutes of the ball game and clicked for their two touchdowns when Sid Luckman started to toss passes.

As a result of the loss—coupled with Green Bay's victory over Detroit—the Bears dropped to third place in the Western division of the loop's standings. The Giants remained deadlocked with Washington for the top spot in the East.

The Giants started the scoring before the game was ten minutes old. They had received a punt on the Bears' 44 and a pass, Ed Danowski to Cuff, had moved the ball to the 36. From there, Cuff dropped back to the 43, and, kicking from an angle to the right, booted one between the uprights for the opening three points.

Cuff Boots Another

Before the game ended, Cuff added another field goal from 40 yards out, and a third from the 24-yard mark. Both of these came in the fourth period, and gave him a total of 10 points for the day, for he also added the point after the Giants' lone touchdown.

This tally marked the second-period action, and topped off a drive which began when Tuffy Leemans returned a Chicago punt 22 yards to the Bears' 96. "Feets" Barnum, Leland Shaffer and Tuffy Leemans combined to lug the ball to the 13. On the next play, Barnum went over right guard for the touchdown.

Things quieted down in the second half and remained that way until Cuff kicked his two fourth-period field goals.

Frank Filchock (No. 30), Redskins' back, lunges through the Pirates' line for 6 yards on this play in the first quarter of the game at Pittsburgh yesterday as the Washington club threatened to duplicate last week's rout of their foes. Two Pirates, Byron Gentry (No. 18) and Rink Bond (No. 55) are about to grab him. No. 11 in the lower left-hand corner is Pittsburgh's center, Ted Grabinski. The great drive with which the Redskins started only built up false confidence in their rooters for at the end they were hanging on the ropes and won, 21-14

Pittsburgh, Oct. 22.—The "breather" the Redskins anticipated against the Pittsburgh Pirates today evolved as a grim defeat-fraught affair with the Washington team grateful for the final blast of the timer's gun that sealed their 21-14 victory.

Strangely transformed from the docile crew that accepted a 44-14 defeat at Washington last week, the Pirates today were a militant, threatening club and induced a fairsized panic among the Redskins with last-quarter motions toward tying the score.

Giants, 'Skins in Tie

At the finish it was the Redskins who were strictly on the defensive, struggling to stave off the Pittsburgh passing attack that had scored one fourth-period touchdown and was rapidly moving toward another. Coley McDonough's passes to Sam Boyd carried the Pirates 55 yards up the field before the Redskins punctured the threat on their own 20-yard line.

The Redskins left the field wondering if they had elevated themselves to the undisputed lead in the Eastern division of the league by their victory, only to learn later that the New York Giants had scored a 16-13 upset over the Chicago Bears to retain a share of the lead.

There were early signs of another Pirate debacle against the Redskins when the Washington club scored a touchdown in the first two minutes on a long pass from Frankie Filchock to Wayne Milner, and produced another touchdown in the first quarter on a Filchock pass to Andy Farkas to take a 14-0 lead, but from that point the Washington attack bogged miserably.

The 8,602 chilled Pittsburghers in the stands saw the Pirates reinstate themselves in the ball game with a second-period touchdown pass from McDonough to Boyd. And after Don Irwin had skipped 25 yards to a third-quarter goal that upped the Redskin lead to 21-7, they whooped it up as the Pirates came back with a 72-yard pass play from McDonough to Boyd Brumbaugh.

Tie Game Imminent

The passes pitched by the tall McDonough, a sharpshooter from Dayton University, were terror-inspiring affairs for the Redskins who saw their comfortable lead vanishing and the probability of a tie game increasing each time the fellow drew back his throwing arm.

From his 25-yard line, with five minutes to play in the final quarter McDonough launched another bombardment. He chucked the ball to Platukis for a nine-yard gain, and then he found Boyd in the open. Boyd grabbed the ball on the run on the Redskins' 45-yard line and for a fleeting few moments a game-tying touchdown was in prospect as Boyd moved goalward.

But at that point the Redskins found a hero of their own in Ed Justice. As Boyd galloped downfield behind hastily gathering blockers and then veered from the sidelines to get into the open, Justice hauled him down from behind on the 20-yard line to avert a touchdown.

'Skins Check Threat

Back on their heels, the Redskins rose to the occasion to defend their lead. Dick Farman rushed McDonough on a pass play that cost the Pirates 8 yards, and Don Irwin knocked down another heave into the end zone. On fourth down a desperate McDonough pass to the end zone hit the cross bar to dash the Pirates hopes.

On their third play of the game, the Redskins scored their first touchdown, after a punt by McCullough had traveled only 15 yards to the Redskin 46. Filchock faded far to his right and floated a long heave to Milner who drew in the ball with a leaping catch over McCullough's shoulder, and galloped 20 more yards to a touchdown unmolested.

A Redskin drive was stopped at the Pittsburgh 5-yard line the next

San Francisco, Oct. 22.—Three swift passes, woven into slashing ground attack, brought Santa Clara's Bronchos a 7-to-0 victory over St. Mary's Gaels today, to add one more upset to a Far Western season already crammed with reversals of the gridiron dope.

The lightning aerial attack, put together early in the third period, topped off an 80-yard drive to scoring turf.

With 6 yards to go, Left Halfback Jimmy Johnson flipped a toss over the heads of St. Mary's players makaing a desperate goal-line stand, into the arms of Left End Joe Lacey. Johnson completed the rally with a true placement through the uprights for the extra tally.

Some 50,000 fans, sitting in summerlike weather, saw the Bronchos upset the applecart with a precision attack that had the Gaels floundering all over the field. Odds favored St. Mary's 2½ to 1 when the game opened.

Last year, when Santa Clara was the favorite, St. Mary's won by the same score which decided today's encounter.

Packers Beat Lions, 26-7; Tie for Lead

By the Associated Press

Green Bay, Wis., Oct. 22.—Completely outplaying the Detroit Lions except for a brief scoring spurt in the first period, the Green Bay Packers ascended to a tie with the Lions for first place in the National Professional Football League's Western Division here today with a 26-to 7 victory.

The game was played before 22,558, the second largest crowd ever to witness a football game in Green Bay. It was Detroit's first defeat of the season.

The Lions punched through for their touchdown in the first period, on a spectacular 58-yard run by Fullback Bill Shepherd, who broke past Center Bus Svendsen and Halfback Joe Laws to scamper to the goal line. Chuck Hanneman, Detroit end, kicked the extra point, and the Lions had a lead of 7 to 0.

The Packers drove back with a powerful ground attack, but Fullback Clarke Hinkle's attempt at field goal from the 28-yard line was wide, and the first period ended soon after.

Get Another Break

Taking the ball at the start of the second period, the Packers marched 49 yards for a touchdown, the break coming when interference was ruled against Jim Tully, Detroit quarterback, during an Arnold Herber to Carl Mulleneaux forward pass. The gain was good for 21 yards to the Detroit 8.

Three plays later Herber tossed into the end zone to Andy Uram, Packer halfback, for the touchdown. Tiny Engebretsen kicked the extra point to tie the score, 7 to 7.

The Packers got another break when Charley Brock, center, intercepted Tully's forward and re-

Two intercepted passes led to La Salle's other touchdowns.

La Salle outgained the Mountaineers in first downs, eight to three, and used its reserves throughout the greater part of the scoreless second half.

Vines Defeats Perry, Takes Pro Net Title

Beverly Hills, Calif., Oct. 22 (AP).—Ellsworth Vines captured the National Professional Tennis championship today by defeating the defending champion, Fred Perry, of England, 8—6, 6—8, 6—1, 20—18.

In the final set, one of the longest ever to be played in a championship tennis tournament, Vines had Perry at set-point several times.

Each time, the Englishman battled his way out of the hole—until Vines finally cracked his service with a smashing offensive and ran out the set.

Georgia Athletic Director 20 Years Dies Suddenly

Athens, Ga., Oct. 22 (AP).—Herman J. Stegeman, 48, connected with the University of Georgia for the past 20 years as coach, athletic director and dean of men, died at his home here today after an illness of more than a year.

Coming to Georgia in 1919 after a brilliant athletic and scholastic career at the University of Chicago, he served as football, basketball, track and baseball coach and as director of athletics, dean of men, and director of physical education.

Tall, broad-shouldered, he was well equipped for his athletic work. He was one of the greatest tackles ever to play for the University of Chicago Maroons, and was a standout basketball player and a star half-miler in track as a member of a Chicago relay team that set Big Ten records.

Tennessee Moves Into Top Spot in National Grid Rankings

Oregon, Baylor, Harvard and Kansas State Also Knocked From Undefeated Class; Vols' Line Play Turned Back Alabama

By Bill Boni
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Tennessee's well-equipped volunteers moved into the place held open for them in college football's "upper crust" yesterday after a week-end in which Pittsburgh, the Army and the Navy, Carnegie Tech, Oregon, Baylor, Harvard and Kansas State were thrown for their first losses of the season.

With the exception of Pitt's 21-13 humbling by a wide-awake young Duquesne team, Gonzaga's 12-7 upset of Oregon and New York U.'s smartly-won 6-0 decision over Carnegie Tech, rated best in the East last year, and Sam Houston Teachers' 9-8 defeat of Rice, the season's fourth major Saturday saw results follow the form chart as closely as a bloodhound on a fresh scent.

Prime form-upholders were the volunteers. Handing Alabama its first defeat of the year, by 21-0, and thus notching their own seventeenth straight victory, Major Bob Neyland's charges cleared the highest hurdle on the path to their second consecutive perfect season. Only Louisiana State, on November 4, looms as a potential threat to Tennessee's hopes for another bowl bid.

Line Play Throttles Alabama

The Vols won the game largely on the play of their line, which throttled 'Bama completely. With George Cafego chiefly directing his team's attack, Tennessee broke loose Sophomore Johnny Butler for a 58-yard scoring sprint in the second quarter, and then converted two late-game breaks, an Alabama fumble and a pass interception, into its other scores.

For impressive performance, Tennessee had to share the day's honors with a host of other ball clubs, notably Duquesne. Three sophomores—John Yacina, who caught a fumble on the fly for the deciding touchdown, John Rokisky and George Gonna—accounted for all the Dukes' points after the Pitt regulars, who had helped win No. 1 national ranking for the Panthers in the Associated Press poll last week, had sprinted away to a 13-0 first period advantage.

Week's Best Game

"The game of the day" next Saturday should be the clash at Columbus between Ohio State and Cornell. The Buckeyes established themselves more firmly in the Big Ten's top flight with their 23-20 conquest of Minnesota, and Cornell's big red squad ran riot for a 47-0 score against previously-unbeaten Penn State to furnish further proof of the Ithacans' standout position in the Eastern Ivy League.

In handing Minnesota the Gophers' first Big Ten licking since 1932, Ohio State scored all three touchdowns on passes and got the vital three points on a field goal by Charles Maag. Michigan, another Big Ten choice, meanwhile kept in step by running up 85 points to none for Chicago, which now has given up 146 points in two games.

Two other Midwestern powers also continued on the march. Notre Dame's long line of backs, operating behind clean-cut blocking, piled up 419 yards in beating back Navy, 14-7, while Oklahoma's Sooners opened defense of the Big Six title with Beryl Clark leading the way to a 27-7 conquest of Kansas.

Sooners' Biggest Rival

—Nebraska, winner by 20-0 over Baylor in an intersectional duel, thereby took rank as chief conference threat to Oklahoma, whom they meet in the season's finale. The Huskers, who hardly had thrown a pass in earlier games, turned loose a barrage by Herman Rohrig that stopped the Bears cold.

Right behind Cornell in the Ivy League stands Penn, which finally broke out some of its vaunted power and deception to top Harvard, 22-7, after the Crimson had opened the scoring. Main operatives for the Red and Blue were Bill Koepsell, hampered by injuries since starring as a sophomore, and Capt. Harlan Gustafson, an aerial combination that clicked for two touchdowns.

North Carolina and Duke, Southern Conference cofavorites, also came up with sterling showings. A brilliant passing attack with Jim Lalanne as its main cog brought the Tarheels up from behind for a 14-14 tie with favored Tulane as both remained unbeaten, and Duke bounced back from its 14-13 defeat by Pitt to swamp Syracuse, 33-6. Individual star for the Blue Devils again was George McAfee, whose three scoring plays covered 133 yards.

Kentucky Stays in Race

Unbeaten and untied Kentucky stayed in the Southeastern Conference race with a 13-6 defeat of Georgia, and Mississippi kept its slate clean with a 42-0 breeze past St. Louis University.

In the Southwest Conference Texas A. and M., its attack revolving around big Jim Kimbrough, walloped Texas Christian, 20-6, to stay on top of the heap; Utah, Mountain States big seven choice, turned back Idaho, a nonconference foe, 35-0, and Oregon State continued its surprise Pacific Coast Conference march by downing Washington, 13-7.

N. Y. U.'s conquest of Carnegie Tech was set up by Ed Boell's quick kick to the Tartan 5-yard line and protected by a defense that intercepted 5 out of 8 Tech passes. Georgetown, heading for a second undefeated season, defeated Bucknell, 13-7. Two touchdown aerials thrown by Tony Canadeo accomplished Gonzaga's defeat of Oregon; a woeful Army team lost to resourceful Yale, 20-15; a field goal and a touchdown gave Sam Houston Teachers its 9-8 victory over disappointing Rice, and a steady 61-yard march brought Manhattan a 7-0 score over Auburn in their surprises.

The day's comeback brigade was headed by Princeton, California, Boston College, Northwestern and Texas.

Shows Running Attack

Princeton finally showed a running attack which, mixed well with Dave Allerdice's aerials, downed Columbia, 14-7. California, after three straight defeats, came up out of the doldrums to beat Washington State, 13-7. B. C., sparked by Lou Montgomery, won over Temple by 19-0. Bill de Correvont looked good, but another sophomore, Don Clawson, put over the touchdowns that whipped Wisconsin, 13-7, and Texas Jack Crain broke away for a 61-yard payoff touchdown and kicked the extra punt, all in the last minute, to edge out Arkansas, 14-13.

Also in the comeback division were Colorado, winner by 13-0 over Colorado State, and Georgetown, which, its winning streak checked by a tie with Syracuse last week, downed Bucknell, 13-7.

Among teams that have been beaten or tied but still are going strong were Holy Cross, aided by Bruno Malinowski's quick kicks to a 20-0 score over Brown; Purdue, whose Mike Byelene was the star of a 20-7 defeat of Michigan State; Indiana, which gained its second Big Ten victory by a 7-6 score over Illinois; Missouri, winner by 9-7 over Kansas State in a Big Six contest; Southern Methodist, which held Marquette to 23 yards and no first downs in a 16-0 triumph; Dartmouth, which converted Bob Krieger from halfback to end in time to have him play a major role in a 14-0 defeat of Lafayette, and Georgia Tech, which ran its string of successful extra points to nine in beating Vanderbilt, 14-6.

Point-a-Minute Clubs

Rutgers and Richmond, which played a tie last week, had it easier this time, the former with a 25-12 score over Maryland and Richmond in blanking Gettysburg, 21-0. Ken Kavanaugh tallied twice as Louisiana State battered Loyola, 20-0; a last-minute field goal by Sophomore Nelson Catlett gave Virginia military a 16-13 margin over Virginia; Washington and Lee beat West Virginia, 9-0, for the first time in 24 years, and Detroit gained an intersectional decision over N. C. State, 21-6.

Florida looked sluggish in its 7-0 win over Tampa, while Wake Forest and Catholic U. joined the point-a-minute club in routing Western Maryland, 66-0, and West Virginia Wesleyan, 60-0, respectively. U. C. L. A. against Montana; Virginia Tech against Centre; Colgate against St. Lawrence, and Mississippi State against Southwestern, were other easy winners.

In addition to Ohio State-Cornell, this week's promising battles are Penn-North Carolina, Fordham-Pitt and Carnegie-Notre Dame in the East; Tulane-Mississippi in the South, Texas Aggies-Baylor in the Southwest, and California, idle yesterday, on the West Coast.

up with glue-fingers. After Cuff's third field goal, Luckman heaved a long one to Dick Plasman, who grabbed the ball on the Giants' 40, and ran down the left sideline for the touchdown. Joe Maniaci missed the extra-point try.

Less than four minutes later the Bears received a punt on their own 26 and were off again. Luckman pitched to Bob MacLeod, who completed a 53-yard advance on the play. Then Luckman tossed to Bob Swisher, who fought his way to the Giants' 3, from where Maniaci plowed over. Jack Manders came in then to kick the extra point.

Anacostia Lions Take to the Air Without Success

A valiant passing attempt by the Anacostia Lions' Fullback Solback went for naught yesterday as No. 5 Police Boys took a 19-0 victory in the P. B. C. Football League. Here his short pass to Joe Soresi in the final quarter is knocked down

No. 4, 5 Clubs Pace Police Grid League

No. 4 Team Scores Over No. 11, 7-0; Lions Bow to No. 5, 19-0

No. 4 and No. 5 remained at the top of the Metropolitan Police B. C. 135-pound football standings yesterday as the former edged out No. 11, 7-0, and the latter romped to a 19-0 triumph over the Anacostia Lions. No. 4's only score against a fighting No. 11 was registered by Ickes when he took a punt and ran 60 yards for the touchdown. Thompson carried the ball over for the extra point.

Halfback Swann, substitute for No. 5, rang up his team's first tally after a drive from the 40-yard line, and Chick followed that eort with an intercepted pass good for 30 yards and a score. The final counter came a few minutes before halftime when an Anacostia Lion kick was blocked by J. Kemp and fallen on by Marcuplis.

In other games yesterday, No. 10 won a 13-0 decision over Capitol Plaza at Fairlawn, Fullback Preiss scoring both touchdowns, and No. 4's 125-pounders won over No. 5, 14-0. The feature of the last game was Harb's safety in the first quarter.

Dodgers Win, 23-14 On 3 Field Goals

Ralph Kercheval Connects From 45, 44 and 38 Yard Lines; 21,000 See Brooklyn Turn Back Philadelphia Eagles

By Judson Bailey
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Brooklyn, Oct. 22.—Transformed into a potent scoring machine by Ralph Kercheval's great goal kicking, the Brooklyn Dodgers plastered a 23-to-14 defeat on the Philadelphia Eagles, of the National Pro Football League, today.

Kercheval, a veteran of five years of money playing since starring for the University of Kentucky, booted three field goals in five placements attempts from distances of 45, 44 and 38 yards out and also kicked one point after touchdown.

While the big Kentuckian's kicking was the delight of the crowd of 21,000, the bigger, better drilled Brooklyn team simply swarmed over the Eagles most of the game.

The Dodgers outgained their foes in rushing, 142 yards to 28, and had a similar margin in passing until little Davey O'Brien started rifling the ball on every play. He engineered 23 of the 34 aerials attempted by Philadelphia and completed 11 for a gain of 140 yards as well as belatedly bringing the Eagles to equality in first downs—ten for each team.

Intercepts Pass

The Dodgers punced out their first touchdown midway in the opening chapter after Kercheval had intercepted one of Dick Rifle's passes on the Philadelphia 34. Mixing reverses and passes, Brooklyn belted its way to the one-yard line and Clarence (Pug) Manders crashed center for a touchdown.

The Eagles tied the score in the next period on a long march which O'Brien started with a 12-yard punt return to Midfield and kept going with continual darting passes into the flat territory. Once Brooklyn was penalized 15 yards for roughing and again the Eagles got a first down on the six when the Dodgers were caught pushing. Fran Murray, the former Penn star, circled left end some 30 yards for the touchdown.

Score on Place Kick

The Dodgers warmed up in the second half, scoring on Kercheval's 44-yard placement within four minutes after the kickoff and again three minutes later got a touchdown on a long pass from Ace Parker to Perry Schwartz good for 47 yards.

Kercheval kicked his other two placement goals within three minutes of the final period and the Dodgers settled down to staving off O'Brien's passing. Five of these and one running play, however, brought Philadelphia its other touchdown soon after.

turned 20 yards to the Detroit 20. Three plays failed, then Engebretsen placekicked a field goal from 34 yards out, giving the Packers the lead, 10 to 7.

A forward pass near the end of the half gave the Packers their next touchdown. With the ball on Green Bay's 40, Herber passed to end Don Hutson, who grabbed the ball on Detroit's 40 and outraced Halfback Lloyd Cardwell to score. Engebretsen kicked the point, and the Packers led 17 to 7.

The third period was a scoreless defensive struggle, but in the fourth the Packers scored again, spectacularly, when Halfback Cecil Isbell passed from the Green Bay 49 to Hutson, who snared the ball on Detroit's 25 and evaded Cardwell to score. Hutson converted, making it 24 to 7.

time the ball changed hands. Jimmy Johnston contributed a 15-yard dash around left end in the march, but Farkas and Filchock failed by inches to make a first down deep in Pirate territory and the Redskins yielded the ball.

Farkas Scores on Pass

But they scored the next time they were in possession. Getting the ball on the Pittsburgh 40 on McCullough's against-the-wind punt, the Redskins moved goalward in one jump. Filchock flipped a weak side pass to Farkas, who bounced off a pair of Pittsburgh tacklers on the 30-yard line, but kept his feet and hustled across the goal.

The Pirates' second-quarter touchdown was the climax of an advance they started on their own 32-yard line. Brumbaugh, acquired from Brooklyn in the trade for Sam Francis, skirted right end for 27 yards before Mickey Parks pulled him down, and then Davidson ripped around left end for 30 yards. Farman averted a touchdown on that play with a flying tackle as Davidson began to move into a clear field.

Pittsburgh scored, however, despite a 15-yard holding penalty that set them back. They scored when Don Irwin unpardonably permitted Boyd to get into the clear and take a 30-yard pass from McDonough in the end zone.

Skins Begin to Move

From their 19-yard line the Redskins launched a new touchdown drive at the start of the second half. Johnston dashed 16 yards around end, Filchock unwound an 11-yard pass to Milner and one to Malone for 9. And then Irwin, on a plunge at left guard, discovered that his blockers had done their work well and found himself in the clear. He romped untouched 23 yards across the goal.

An apparent Redskin touchdown was nullified a bit later when Littlefield fumbled Edwards kickoff and Charley Malone romped 20 yards to the goal with the loose ball, but the play was called back. Referee Tehan citing the rule forbidding advance with a fumbled kick-off.

The Redskins, given the ball on the Pirate 20, couldn't advance, and at the start of the final quarter the Pirates went into action. Davidson and Brumbaugh scampered to a first down on the Pirate 27 and then it was that McDonough hurled a long pass to Brumbaugh. Blockers removed Safety Man Andy Farkas from Brumbaugh's path and he stomped 55 yards to a touchdown, the play covering 72 yards.

'Skins On Defensive

The rest of the game was a harrowing affair for the Redskins, who found themselves in a struggle to protect their 21-to-14 lead. Deep in his own territory Filchock attempted a pass and Maras intercepted the ball on the Redskin 22. The immediate Pirate threat was removed when Farkas intercepted a wild heave by McDonough, and Filchock brought the ball upfield with a 23-yard dash to the Pirate 40.

Sammy Baugh was sent in for one play, a kick that he aimed at the coffin corner, but it was a miserable effort that went outside on the Pirate 25, and Baugh was withdrawn.

C. U. Tops D. C. Elevens With 30 Points a Game

Georgetown Claims Share of Leadership Due To Harder Schedule; Marlyand Shades G.W. For 3d Spot; Hoya-Colonial Game Saturday

By Jack Munhall.

Catholic University's high-powered machine continued to pace the District's five college elevens over the week-end burying West Virginia Wesleyan, 60-0, under a merciless attack that has averaged 30 points for four games.

Close behind the Cardinals and claiming at least a share of the local lead because of a more strenuous schedule comes Georgetown, also unbeaten but tied once in four games, which scored a spiritless victory over Bucknell. Selecting the third team is difficult. Maryland dropped its second game in four starts, losing to Rutgers, 25-12, and George Washington squeezed out a 13-7 triumph Friday night over underrated Citadel for its second success against a surprise setback by Butler.

Awaiting George Washington's performance against Georgetown Saturday in a classic that should pack Griffith Stadium, Maryland seems to have been the more impressive of the two against a better brand of opposition. The Terps, statistically speaking, are far more powerful than they have shown. Frank Dobson's boys outplayed favored Virginia most of the game but lost to a fourth-period rally and the Cavaliers' star halfback, Jim Gillette, 14-12. Then last Saturday the Old Liners contrived to drop a weird decision to underdog Rutgers, which they outdowned, 12-6, outgained on the ground, 150 yards to 112, and by passes, 27 yards to 10.

G. U. Unimpressive

However, both Virginia and Rutgers are generally considered stronger than Davis and Elkins, Butler and The Citadel, the Colonials' three foes to date. Further, George Washington hasn't yet given a convincing performance—even a performance expected of its material.

To date, Bill Reinhart's Buff and Blue team has been following the bad example of Maryland in rolling up staggering yardage gains where it doesn't count much and then fizzling out when in scoring territory. You might think Maryland and George Washington were goal-line shy the way they start to back up after reaching their opponents' 20-yard line.

Conversely, Catholic and Georgetown are opportunists, seldom wasting a chance to score. Considering the 120 points C. U. has compiled against South Carolina, Elon, Detroit and West Virginia Wesleyan you could scarcely accuse the Cards of lack of punch. Georgetown, too, does little fooling when pay dirt beckons. The Hoyas' total of 54 points is only a bit more than half C. U.'s 120, but cracking powerful lines like Temple, Syracuse and Bucknell is not as easy as running over Elon, West Virginia Wesleyan and even South Carolina.

Temple Was Tough

Thirty four or more than half Georgetown's points were scored against Roanoke, but in that game the Hoya regulars played only about 15 minutes. Temple afforded Georgetown very little opportunity of scoring, for it held the Hilltop eleven in its own territory until late in the game when Georgetown marched from its own 20 to the Owls' 17 where Augio Lio kicked his winning field goal. Ditto the Syracuse contest. Besides the two touchdowns Georgetown scored for a 13-13 tie—and one was on a 70-yard run by Lou Ghecas—G. U. got in scoring position only one other time and it did cash in, but the referee ruled its pass completed in the end zone had been caught outside the playing field and it was nullified.

This week-end will bring rugged opposition for all the colleges, except American University which idles after successive lickings by Randolph-Macon and Johns Hopkins. Catholic University will travel to Miami for a Friday night engagement with a pretty good Miami U. eleven. G. W. and G. U. meet here, of course, and Maryland holds Homecoming Day with Florida as its foe, Saturday.

Scoring Records

Team and individual scoring records for the games played up to and including Saturday by the five colleges reveal many interesting facts. One of the outstanding developments of the season is the presence of two fine point-after-touchdown kickers at Catholic University and one of them is a rarity in modern day football—a guy who can really drop kick. He is Casmir Kaycewski, a sophomore tackle, who has booted four extra points in that manner, including two for two against West Virginia Wesleyan Saturday. In the department of adding points to touchdown, Ksycewski yields only to another Cardinal tackle, Carmen Pirro, who has banged over eight place kicks.

The scoring lead is shared by two more Cardinals, Carmen's brother, Rocco, who is playing plenty of fullback for C. U. and Frank Krawczel, a much improved senior halfback. They have 24 points from six touchdowns. Second is Georgetown's halfback, Lou Ghecas, who has 18 from three touchdowns.

Close behind this Mercury-footed Hoya comes Maryland's great halfback, Pershing Mondorff, who has scored 16 points by every method he can for his own team. He has no safety to his credit—or discredit but two touchdowns, a field goal, and two extra points from placement.

Already linemen have scored nearly their normal quota of points for an entire season and ends are also well ahead of last year. Francis Beamer, the Terps' 6-foot-3 wingman star, has caught two touchdown passes, and a teammate, Frank Dwyer, has one by this method. Mike Monchlovich became the second center to crash the scoring column when he scooted 42 yards with a Citadel fumble Friday night. Ed Kowalski, Georgetown tackle, picked up six points by falling on a blocked kick in the Bucknell game. G. U.'s center, Al Matuza, has a touchdown to his credit for a 28-yard run on an intercepted pass against Roanoke three weeks ago.

Bob Nowaskey, end, is passing George Washington with 7 points. Five other Colonials have scored one touchdown each.

Rams Defeat Cards, 24-0

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 22.—The powerless Chicago Cardinals dropped their sixth National Pro League football game today to a hard-running, smooth-passing Cleveland eleven, 24 to 0, before 10,000 spectators.

The Cleveland victory dropped the Cards deeper into the League's Western division cellar and gave the Rams a record of two wins in six games. Chicago never seriously threatened the Ram goal, registering only four first downs, one of those on a penalty and gained only 68 yards on the ground and in the air.

The Rams connected for their first touchdown in the opening period, starting the drive on their own 47. John Drake reeled off 27 yards at right end and Parker Hall completed three passes that put the ball on the Cards 3. Drake then rammed the line for the score. Lew Bostick place kicked.

Late in the second period, Milt Popovich punted from the Cards' goal line and Marty Slovak returned 12 yards to the Chicago 31. Hall tossed an 18-yard pass to Gaylon Smith and then pitched another aerial to Vic Spadaccini for the touchdown. Bostick again converted from placement.

After a fairly even third period the Rams climaxed a 40-yard march with Smith's 2-yard line plunge for the third touchdown. Corby Davis kicked the point from placement. Later in the quarter another Ram advance bogged down and Davis backed up to the 27-yard line and kicked a field goal.

Peacock Beats Burnett, 2 Up, for Indian Spring Club Title

Howard Nordlinger, Bogart Win Crowns

Houghton and Barnett Defeat Burton and Cox At Army-Navy, 2 and 1; Maj. and Mrs. Giles Top Field at Columbia; Fowler Is Victor

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Roger Peacock won the Indian Spring Club championship yesterday, a title nearly equivalent to the District Amateur, as he defeated Volney Burnett, 2 up, in the 36-hole finals. It was Peacock's first victory in the tourney, in his third final round appearance.

With 75 per cent of the best simon-pures in the District members of the club, he completed a march through the finest field ever to compete in a club championship in this city. The winner is also Middle Atlantic Amateur champ, and was finalist in the Maryland State.

Burnett, who reversed the decision in the recent city championship, was apparently off to another victory as he held a 3-up lead at the ninth hole, but Roger won the fifteenth through the eighteenth to lead 2-up at the halfway mark.

Burnett, who played the first nine in sub-par 34 in the morning, repeated the second time around the course and cut Peacock's margin to 1-up at the twenty-seventh, and evened the match with a par on the twenty-ninth. The new champion, who succeeds Buddy Sharkey, won the thirty-first with a par and the next with a birdie fr his winning margin. He lst the long thirty-fourth but clinched the crown with a par on the thirty-sixth.

Lieut. Comdr. Hurt won the second flight over R. D. Workman, 2 and 1, and M. B. Dale th ethird flight over D. D. Wright, 5 and 4.

WOODMONT

After a lapse of several years Howard Nordlinger scored again in the Woodmont Club Championship, defeating Dr. Milton Harris, the 1937-38 titleholder, 3 and 1 in the 18-hole finals.

Harris was off to an early lead but Nordlinger squared the match at the turn. Harris forged ahead on the back nine but Nordlinger caught him at the thirteenth and won 15-16 and 17 with two pars and a birdie for the 3-hole margin.

Dr. Sam Bogdonoff won the second flight over Al Small, 4 and 3, and Al Schneider the first flight consolation, defeating R. A. Phillipson, 2 and 1.

Soccer Game Halted; Players Are Too Rough

Sport Club-Marlboro Game Stopped; Fans Interfer; Heurich Wins

With the Washington and Suburban Soccer League lead at stake, Sport Club and Marlboro battled a bit too hard yesterday and their clash was called off with but two minutes of the first half remaining. Sport Club held a 1-0 lead at the time, but interference by spectators and rough play by the players caused Referee H. Heiser to call off hostilities.

The defending champion Heurich club finally hit its stride in a game with previously unbeaten Sandy Spring at the Monument Ground, and the final count was 6-1 in favor of the Brewers. McBain and L. Gunn hung up a pair of goals apiece, and Knight and Mirones single points.

Seats Available For Hoyas Game

Though Saturday's Georgetown-George Washington game is attracting a near-record advance sale for a local college grid attraction there are still good seats available, it was announced last night.

This applies particularly to the $2.20 section which contains the choice upper box seats. Tickets may be purchased at the athletic departments of both schools, at Spalding's, Sports Center, the American Automobile Association and at Griffith Stadium.

Hart, Giant Colored Heavy, Faces Howell, Louis' Spar Mate

Al Hart, 220-pound Washington Barracks colored fighter, will get a chance to prove whether he has what it takes to climb to heavyweight fame tonight at Turner's arena when he runs up against Jim Howell, hard-punching New York veteran, in one of the two eight-round feature matches.

For the first time in a local ring Hart will be face to face with what can be termed as real opposition—in fact, he will be the underdog against Howell, a Tony Galento type of fighter who has never been knocked off his feet in more than 100 rounds of sparring with Joe Louis.

The New Yorker, a familiar figure around the Louis camp, has been on the champion's list of sparring partners every time Louis pitched camp to train for a tough battle.

Hart has scored seven knockouts in eight local fights against heavyweights who can be described only as bums in the fight parlance. Tonight, however, Hart will be outweighed 10 pounds and will have to demonstrate considerable skill if he expects to stay clear of Howell's flailing fists. In his last appearance here Howell lost a narrow decision to Willie Reddish.

Irish Eddie Pierce will meet Eddie Drear, of Houston, Tex., in the night's second eight-rounder. Pierce, a middleweight, has run up a record of 19 straight victories and recently boxed a 10-round draw with Ken Overlin. First bout is at 8:30.

The preliminaries bring back Joey Spangler, of Richmond, to fight Eddie Finazzo, of Baltimore, in a six; Al Gilbert, local middleweight, against Hunter Crostic, of Richmond, in a four, and Buster Miller, of Washington, against Tommy Julius, of Baltimore, in another four.

El Gieb Wins Laurel Stakes With 427 Total

Mike Vitale Second In 3-Game Bowling Event at Queen Pin

El Gieb, a Roosslyn team representative in the District League, won the first annual Laurel Handicap Sweepstakes, a two-day event concluded last night at Queen Pin Alleys. The handicap allowance was two-thirds, under a 120 scratch limit.

Gieb had a 423 total with games of 158, 117 and 148, and a four-pin handicap for 427, that took down first prize of $50. Mike Vitale, of the Arcadia team, was second with 414-12, 426, winning $25.

Rocca Nocero was third, with 416 including an 18 handicap, worth $15, while Lou Jenkins had 406 for fourth, bowling from scratch, winning $10. Nearly 100 bowlers competed.

Turner Boosts Rassle Purse

Winner Hader-Evans Bout to Get Extra $50

Jack Hader, the local "hate-man," and Don Evans, the new Texas wrestling sensation, will have an added incentive when they step into action next Thursday night at Turner's Arena for their third "grudge" match, for Promoter Joe Turner announced last night that he is donating a special $50 purse to the winner.

It isn't the first time the promoter has swelled the coffers of the victor in a local match, but if such an announcement makes for better wrestling and spurs on the wrestlers—Turner hopes to dig his jeans more often.

Promoter Turner also announced that Evans, who lost to Hader last week in 22 minutes after having won two decisions during the course of the match—strange as it may seem—has agreed to Hader's terms for a bout of two out of three falls. This is the first time in six years, Turner stated, that there have been two out of three fals in a feature match. If this system proves popular there may be more bouts on this basis, Turner said.

A strong supporting cast is being lined up. Hans Kampfer, the Adonis, and Frank Brunowicz, who recently returned to America after barnstorming in Europe, have been book. Both quit Europe when the war broke out. Neither has been seen in action here for several years.

Tee to Green

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Acknowledging that anything can happen in an 18-hole round of golf and that a score or more golfers of near equal ability play at all courses, at least over the week-ends, it is unusual that the annual club championships follow the form sheets as close as they do, and are divided among so few players.

WHITTLESEY

Looking over the local results of more than a dozen clubs for the last three years, each club has two or three golfers that dominate the club tourneys, the highlight of every intraclub calendar. There's something that impresses the average club member about the champion of his own club, as much as if the party held a dozen or so sectional or city championships.

Denoting the winner's berth, runner-up and medalist as the coveted positions in the tourneys, no club in town over the past three years has watched the varied positions change hands with each fall affair.

In some cases it is not so much one player winning every year as it is the "bridegroom but never a bride" jinx. For instance, Mrs. J. C. Dale as advanced to the Kenwood Women's finals three years in a row, been medalist twice, but lost to a different opponent each time in the title round.

The Capital men's play has been a two-man affair. Frank White was runnen-up two years before breaking the jonah this year, while Billy Houghton has won twice and been medalist twice. The last two years Tony Willmett has been a heavy favorite at Argyle, but both times has been swamped in the finals.

Billy Shea has won the medal twice and been runner-up as many times at Congressional, while at Indian Spring, the toughest crown in town, Buddy Sharkey scored two years running before yesterday's Peacock-Burnett match. The latter was medalist and runner-up on two other occasions, while it was Peacock's first victory.

Johnny Bergelin has marched to two in a row at Kenwood and this year he was a total of 19 up in two matches. In comparatively divided play at Washington, Ralph Fowler, Joe Baldwin and Mrs. Wilda Martin have done their share.

The only three-time winner is Mrs. Ruth Mothershead at Argyle.

Mrs. J. F. Gross figured in two medal ties and one medalist's role including this year's qualifying, and then she walked off with the Columbia crown. Meanwhile the men's play at Columbia has produced three winners in as many years.

Mrs. John Howard is a two-time winner at Belle Haven, Mrs. Bishop Hill won twice at Chevy Chase before losing this year in the finals, while Mrs. Myron Davy has been winner, runner-up and two-time medalist at Congressional.

Marion Brown boasts two out of three titles at both Manor and Indian Spring, probably the best record considering the competition at the two clubs, while at Manor she won the medal twice and was runner-up in this year's finals. Mrs. L. G. Pray has been medalist, winner and finalist, one at a time, at Manor. Mrs. Henry Goodman, Woodmont, is a two-time champ.

Harry Pitt has carried off the men's title twice at Manor, making it six times in all, while at Chevy Chase, Page Hufty and Ralph Quinter, jr., have split the winner and runner-up roles over three years, with a 2 to 1 edge for Hufty.

Dr. Milton Harris won two years in a row at Woodmont before losing yesterday to the golfer that has dominated Woodmont's play for years, Howard Nordinger.

Beaver Dam has changed hands each year with Joe Balestri the latest, while Ralph Bogart made it two in a row at Army and Navy. Mrs. David Clark hasn't been stopped the last two times out at Army and Navy, while in the Beaver Dam women's play Mrs. Florence Godfrey and Mrs. C. E. Purdy have dominated.

Probably the biggest upset in the last three years is Ed Merkle's recent triumph at Columbia, and that is the only affair where the word upset was used every day throughout the first flight play.

Rosenberg's Gold Star Wins Show Honors

Local Doctor's Chesnut Dominates Bridle Path Horse Event; Many Spills Mar Day; Lady Bee Scores

By Anne Hagner

Gold Star, rangy chestnut owned by Dr. Paul Rosenberg, won two blue ribbons in the Bridle Path Horse Show, held yesterday morning at the Rock Creek equitation field, to be the biggest winner of the event.

The show, given by the National Parks Commission to promote horsey interests in the District, attracted neasly a thousand spectatons to watch Gold Star and dozens of other privately owned and riding academy horses go through their paces. Falls were so numerous that the rail-birds were somewhat disappointed when an exhibitor failed to bite the dust, but fortunately no one was hurt during the proceedings.

In fact, spills are so much a part of the semi-annual event that this year flowers were presented to the first lucky lady to "come a cropper." She was Tacie Davis, who hit the ground in the 3-foot jumping class and hopped up to receive her award. Well-informed sources said they doubted that Miss Davis did it on purpose.

One of the smoothest performances of the day was Phyllis Buxbaum on a bay mare named Lady Bee, who got to the entrance gate almost too late to enter the 3-foot class but was allowed to take the course and finally won the division for riders under 16. The second division, for older riders, saw Eddie Talbert on Cold Snap win over Greystone, with Billy Arnold up. Third and fourth places went to Charles Simpson on Ginger and Guy Cunkleman on Lady.

Toughest class on the program was the open jumping event, with 4-foot fences providing plenty of trouble for the participants. Gold Star won the class over Joy Cummings on Dan's Rocksand, Frank Christmas on Dr. H. A. Woods' Blackie, and Jane Wells on Lumber Jack, which finished in that order.

Another hard proposition from the judges' point of view was the hack class for privately owned mounts. Entrants were required to walk, trot, canter, gallop, do figure-eights at a canter, and in general prove that they were mannerly enough to give a pleasant ride.

NATIONAL BOHEMIAN BEER

In the brewing of fine beer there is no substitute for quality.

Quality costs money.

It stands out plain in every bottle of National Bohemian—the most expensive ten cent bottle of beer your dealer can buy.

He pays more for it than for any other dime beer for the quality-minded man who knows what to expect in a good bottle of beer.

Don't say beer—say NATIONAL BOHEMIAN

Selections at Laurel

Dear Al:

J. Yancey Christmas, of the Marlboro Christmasses, strode into the winner's circle last Saturday to receive a trophy from Mrs. Spalding Lowe Jenkins. A veteran horseman, with whom I was discussing the race just run, said: "Mark my words, Bill. This Yancey Christmas is going to be on the receiving end of many a trophy with that colt of his." Yancey's Rough Pass, a few minutes before, had turned on the heat in the stretch and left Victory Morn up the race track to win going away. I don't want to jinx the colt or Yancey by mentioning the Kentucky Derby, but that is exactly the kind of colt we saw in action in that mile race.

Larger than Victory Morn, this Rough Pass seems to be crying for distance and looks as if he can carry weight, too. Rough Pass may go down in turf history as one of the biggest horse bargains of all time. Christmas bought him at the Maryland Breeders' sale last fall for only $265, and the colt has accounted for more than $11,000 in winnings thus far. There was another bargain at the same sale. By-Pass II, sire of Rough Pass, Philosopher and others, was knocked down for a mere $1,100 to some West Coast sportsman. It would take a carload of mighty pretty pennies to buy that stallion now. There must be something more behind the suspension of Jockey C. F. Simpson than the simple announcement of his unsatisfactory previous ride on Crack Favor made by the stewards. If it were the mere form reversal, there have been several much more glaring than that of this 2-year-old. In fact, as long as I have been around the tracks there seems to have been an unwritten law that handlers of 2-year-olds could do about as they pleased until the youngster broke his maiden. When Crack Favor won last week, he defeated Cherry's Child by a head in a driving finish. On October 12 Crack Favor, making his first start since last April, was in a race with Cherry's Child and finished seventh to the Howard Bruce colt's sixth. Cherry's Child, however, had been running fairly regular. Last Friday's race was there-fifths of a second faster than that of October 12. Since Crack Favor was making his second start and Cherry's Child was seasoned, it would seem that Crack Favor had more right to show improvement than his rival. It is true, however, that Crack Favor was 73 to 1 on October 12 and only slightly better than 5 to 1 last Friday. Now, for the winners.

BILL.

First race—Storcky just failed to last when meeting a similar field of juveniles last start. With the winner of that heat missing, he receives high figure. Flying Silver has raced creditably this fall, and with the right ride should offer stout contention. Phara Supreme is not outmatched and could surprise.

Second race—Chuckatuck had the misfortune to fall on the first jump in his lone start here. The Hitchcock protege is credited as being a crackerjack timber topper, and if he stands up he should win. Autumnquest has needed several races to fit her for this distance. Coxswain fell last start, but with better luck should hold the others safe.

Third race—Belle High didn't have the speed to threaten better juvenile platers in New York. She is more cheaply placed in this heat and figures to register. Town Prince looms as a dangerous contender if he runs back to several good races this fall. Race Rider has the speed to become a formidable contestant.

Fourth race—Hadnogal, making his first start in several months, turned in a glowing exhibition of speed, running in fast time to finish second. A similar effort should win this. Highminded is in form ando may offer strong opposition. Waugh Pop, with Robertson riding, could show.

Fifth race—Mr. Grundy, racing in his best form, turned back this field last start in fast time. He has class and in his present cordition looks like a repeater. Trailer could not find racing room to race in his best fashion in that event, but with better luck should be pressing the top horse. Prairie Dog gets the call over the others.

Sixth race—Larkar displayed an unsuspected brand of speed last start, which stamps her as the winner of this affair if she should duplicate that effort today. Simoon was not persevered with when outmatched in the Gallant Fox Handicap at Belmont. He is more suitably placed here. Sports Writer for show.

Seventh race—Fair Rock drops considerable weight after running second in a similar field of horses and should be equal to staving off any challenges from these Maryland-breds. Clapair disclosed qualities which make him a threat when he raced here last week. Conville has a good money chance.

ped afSfiG;2-'-o upg SHR SHRDL

Eighth race—Light Chatter dropped a nose decision to Orchid's Next last start after forcing the pace the entire journey. With less weight, she is favored to score in the nightcap. Campship has early speed, but quit when running with the top horse. High Tension won his last, but meets keener competition.

Best bet—Light Chatter.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris

Ha-Cha Gardner, Buddy Harmon and Ted Alexander, of the Mayflower Orchestra

JESTERS' TOUCHDOWN. "Why should Hedy La Marr play left tackle? I thing she should be the center" . . . That's the sort of talk that drove us dizzy at a rehearsal of the King's Jesters at he Metronome Room . . . It seems the Jesters are picking an all-American team of movie stars to figure in one of those catch-as-catch-can midnight ballad sessions. They'll probably not pop this rare bit of folk music for a couple of weeks because it will take a lot of rehearsal. Bob Savage, of Chicago, is writing and rewriting the lyrics.

CLUB 16, new cocktail spot in the Lafayette Hotel, will open today. Thornton and Stori, who've just finished a solid season at Baltimore's uppity Hotel Belvedere, will play from 5 to 7 in the afternoon, from 10 to 1, for the later custom. They harmonize on violin, piano and accordion, sing all the new favorites, bring a fine reputation as diversionists with them from the Belvedere . . . The Club Lafayette has been closed for a few days, pending the ironing out of some employment difficulties. Owner Jeff Ford expects to reopen the club in a week or ten days, probably with a new Washington orchestra.

MAD INTERLUDES. Shar-Zad. Bill McCune playing a tune on soda bottles . . .He blows into 'em, doesn't tap them, can get them into tune in nothing flat by deftly pouring various quantities of water into them. So far he's just playing "Sweet Sue" and "Young Man on the F. T.," but will gladly take on request numbers. P. S.: We couldn't recognize our "request number," but Bill said it was a special arrangement.

Troika. Dena Larena selling "Bublitchki." She finally gave a bublitchki (Russian doughnut) to a bald-topped gent. He rapped it on the table like a hammer, said, "I'll bet this bublitchki was baked for the Czar."

Lounge Riviera. The look of terror in the eyes of that gentleman who's had three brandy and sodas and spied a lady with purple hair . . . He was quite all right. The lady was Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, who prefers lavender locks.

Pall Mall Room. Emcee Bob Driscoll, 6 feet 3 and weighting over 200, dancing like a feather or Eleanor Powell. Something's wrong with the law of gravity in Pall Mall.

Shoreham Blue Room. That party who'd been to see "The Women" and kept lifting their wine glasses and joyously toasting, "L'amour, l'amour!" The infection spread and everyone for tables around began to dring to la'mour. L'amour, indeed!

Pirates' Den. The astounded, dazed and slightly blushing faces of new customers as they enter amid clanging gongs, pistil shots and the huzzahs of 40 buccaneers. Well, that's the way cash customers ought to be greeted.

Mayfair. Burt Raeburn's story of how he doubled for Don Ameche in "Getaway." Says Burt, "They photographed a taxi crash 20 times. I got a stiff neck, a sprained back, broken arches and painter's colic. It cost me more for liniment than I got for impersonating Mr. Don Amerche."

Anchor Room. The fellow who tried to toss a cigarette out an Anchor porthole and got it right back in his schnozzle. Can't blame him, though. Those portholes are so realistic they'd fool an admiral.

Hi Hat. Jack Manning's "Strings of Romance" cutting loose with the darndest ditty, "Shootin' the Sherbet With Herbert." It's an English import. Why should the British do things like this to us? We've always been their friends.

Brown Derby. Al's story of how he met George. He says, "It was in New Orleans. We were in show business, but we had no place to show in, no place to sleep, nothin' to eat. So we started a night club."

HAIL! G. P. O.! We hear that there'll be quite a group of entertainers from the Government Printing Office competing in the Neptune Room's talent contest finals tomorrow eve. Bert Granoff says that the Department of the Interior is also proving a mine of talent. So, Mr. Boss, if your secretary starts yodeling, you'll know she's just getting in trim for one of Neptune's "Talent Interludes."

TROUBLE DEPARTMENT. Lotus. The reason Bill Strickland is looking so pale and interesting is he's been having teeth yanked by the half dozen. You know how it is. Get a pain in your ankle and y our doctor says, "Go have your teeth pulled."

Madrillon. That slightly set expression on Greeter Martin's kind countenance is the result of a new furnace being installed in the Martin residence. It cost mazuma aplenty and Martin says, "I can't even take it out of my income tax."

TALLEST GLASSES in town are those used for tall drinks in the Cafe Caprice. Unless you're 5 feet 6 inches you have to stand on your chair to drink outa them.

ROVING TROUBADOURETTE. That's Muriel Sherman, nightingale of the Mayflower Lounge. Muriel has sung in the smartest spots in all America's big cities from Denver to Manhattan. She's also been the canary of many big-name bands, including those of Abe Lyman, Larry Funk and Fred Martin.

BRIDGE PARTIES are being held regularly in Bamboo Gardens. It's an ideal spot, too. The leddies have luncheon, then move over to that cheerful sunny corner on the upper terrace for an afternoon of trying for grand slams.

TUNE HOUNDS. To that wisie, Milton Davis, of the Rainbow Room, we're indebted for the information that the Library of Congress is infested by beagles who watch the expiration of copyrights on famous songs. If the composer or his heirs skip one hour in getting the copyright renewed—too bad! The pirates will have kidnaped the song.

EARLY MASTERPIECE. Dick Ashby, owner of Dick's Grill, prizes most highly his photographs of famous people given to him before they became famous. A top item is the pic of Eleanor Powell taken away back in 1933 when she was just another tap dancer.

Steel Output Continues Rise To 91 Per Cent

Recent Tonnage Largest In History, Reports Magazine Steel

By the Associated Press

Cleveland Oct. 22.—Operations in the steel industry have reached 91 per cent of capacity and producers see no let-up in pressure for deliveries, says the magazine Steel.

With production up 1½ points last week, steelmakers reported new orders "rapidly are filling what little available capacity remains on fourth-quarter schedules."

Steel said first-quarter bookings are on the rise, "apparently on the belief that price advances in that period will be smaller than expected previously."

"While recent operations on a percentage basis have been exceeded on numerous occasions in the past, tonnage output lately has been larger than for any other week in history," the publication said. "Additional plant facilities are being readied for service. In the Pittsburgh district alone five more blast furnaces are being relined or repaired."

Consumers, caught with low inventories at the recent industrial upswing, are endeavoring to bring their inventories to a level commensurate with improved operations, Steel said.

Ore Stocks Lower

Despite heavy movement of iron ore by Great Lakes vessels, Steel said ore stocks on hand at blast furnaces and lower lake ports October 1 were 2,000,000 tons below those of a year ago.

"Export business in steel products continues overshadowed by domestic demand," Steel said, "only relatively small lots being accepted for freight shipment. Exoort prices are strong, with plates advanced an additional $5 a ton and black sheets up $3."

Tin plate production is up 3 points to 95 per cent, with little further capacity available. Steel's scrap composite is off 83 cents to $21, now $1.16 below the early October peak, but $7 higher than a year ago.

The 91 per cent operating rate is 39¼ points above the corresponding 1938 period. Last week Pittsburgh gained 3 points to 89 per cent, Chicago 1½ to 89, Eastern Pennsylvania 4 to 74, New England 10 to 100 St. Louis 2½ to 77 and Cincinnati 2 to 88. Unchanged were Youngstown at 94, Cleveland and Birmingham both at 90 and Wheeling at 93. Shutdowns for furnace repairs lowered Buffalo district operations 2½ points to 86 and Detroit's output 2 points to 98.

Rail Equipment Orders Expand In September

New freight cars placed in service or ordered by the Class I railroads in the first nine months this year total 37,757, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. Of that number 14,704 have been put in service since January 1 this year and 23,053 were on order on October 1, 1939.

Class I railroads in September placed orders for 16,497 new freight cars, which exceeded by 1,793 cars the number of new freight cars put in service in the first nine months this year. Of the total number for which orders were placed in September, 10,774 were coal cars and 5,413 were box cars. Orders also were placed for 310 new flat cars. Out of the 23,053 new freight cars on order, 4,835 are to be built in railroad shops while the remainder are to be constructed by private car-building concerns.

New steam locomotives on order on October 1, 1939, totaled 68, of which five were ordered in September. On October 1 last year there were 14 on order and on October 1, 1937, there were 212. New electric and Diesel locomotives on order on October 1 this year totaled 40, orders for nine having been placed in September. On the same day last year, there were 24 such orders and two years ago, there were 28.

Pacific Lighting Nets $4.20 a Share

San Francisco, Oct. 22.—Consolidated reports of Pacific Lighting Corporation and subsidiaries for the 12 months ended September 30, 1939, shows net earnings equivalent to $4.20 a share on the outstanding common stock, compared with $3.20 a share for the 12 months ended September 30, 1938. Gross operating revenues for the 12 months ended September 30, 1939, total $46,401,948, an increase of $1,843,588 over gross revenues for the corresponding 12 months ended September 30, 1938.

Tide Water Oil

New York, Oct. 22 (AP).—Tide Water Associated Oil Companies today reported for the September quarter net income of $2,048,906, after charges, equal after preferred dividend requirements to 23 cents a common share. This compared with net income of $2,424,200 or 29 cents a common share for the corresponding 1938 quarter.

Most Life Policies Cover War Risks

New York, Oct. 22 (AP).—Most life insurance coverage in force in the United States today gives full protection to the policyholder even if he engages in active military or naval service, according to Ray D. Murphy, president of the Actuarial Society of America, in a statement released today by the Annual Message of Life Insurance Committee.

"The life insurance policy has been under a continuous process of remodelling and improvement over the years until today the current 'streamlined' version of this contract bears little resemblance to its early ancestors," Mr. Murphy stated. "Innumerable restrictions on the policyholder as to military service, travel, occupation and other matters have been gradually eliminated until today the modern policy gives the widest coverage to the policyholder since life insurance as we know it was originated in the United States 100 years ago.

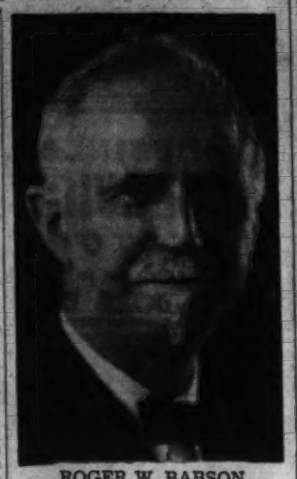
Best October Business In 10 Years, Babson Says

Present Status Is 22 Per Cent Above Last October and Only 2 Per Cent Below Peak Reached in 1937

By Roger W. Babson

Babson Park, Mass., Oct. 22.—Business this month is the best for any October in ten years. The United States has experienced one of the most sensational boomlets in its history in the last two months. Figures gathered from all over the country, which I found on my desk on my return from the Far East, tell a spectacular story. Business is now 22 per cent above a year ago and within 2 per cent of the 1937 peak!

I can harly believe that business has soared so rapidly. Yet, the figures which I have at hand do not lie. They show that textile mills, automobile factories, machine tool shops, steel mills, railroads, power plants, lumber camps, and shipyards are bristling with activity. When I sailed out of the Golden Gate on August 25 the temperature of business was 97 per cent, according to my Babsonchart. Today it is 112 per cent, compared with the 1937 high of 114 per cent and the 1929 all-time peak of 122 per cent.



ROGER W. BABSON

Freight Gains Spectacular

Here are the facts concerning the Nation's leading industries:

(1) Textiles: Cotton mills have boosted schedules 15 per cent in the past eight weeks. Woolen factories are operating day and night. The rayon industry has shot ahead. The textile industry as a whole, while not the most active of the Nation's monster businesses, is flirting with its 1937 highs.

(2) Railroads: A spectacular increase has taken place in railroad traffic. Weekly freight car loadings have jumped to 835,000 from 680,000 in the Labor Day week. With the exception of one or two weeks in 1937, railroad traffic is the highest since the lush days of a decade ago. This tremendous increase in the transportation of goods simply means that there has been a huge gain in the amount of business being transacted.

(3) Automobiles: This is normally the season when automobile assembly lines speed up, so the rise in weekly motor output from 12,000 cars before Labor Day to around 90,000 at present breaks no records. New car sales are reported to be exceptionally good and motor makers are boosting their production schedules faster than is customary.

(4) Building: Latest figures on home building show a splendid gain over the faltering figures of the late summer and a 30 per cent step-up over a year ago. Moreover, the building upswing has injected new life into the lumber camps, where orders are running far ahead of both the "cut" and shipments.

Sharpest Steel Rise in History

(5) Steel: Activity in this industry is accurately measured by the weekly rate of operations. The sharpest rise in steel operations in history has taken place since August! Starting at around 60 per cent of capacity in the Labor Day week, they have skyrocketed to around 90 per cent—an increase of 30 points in less than two months! Reports indicate that thousands of workers have returned to their jobs in the steel towns.

(6) Coal: For two years the soft coal industry has been "in the doghouse." Ever since the 1937 boom backfired, the coal mines have been limping along at about 60 per cent of normal. Within six short weeks daily coal output has caromed up 25 per cent. The recent report stating that the first barge load of coal sent to Europe in 12 years has just left the United States provided a clue as to the war's effect on this industry.

(7) Mining: Copper sales in September were the highest on record. Metal prices have been marked up 25 to 30 per cent. Operations at the copper, zinc, lead, iron and other mines are marching toward the 1937 levels. Meanwhile activity in the petroleum industry as a whole is at an all-time high.

(8) Utilities: The measure of activity in the electric industry is the weekly power consumption figure reported in the newspapers. Readers who follow this total know that more electric power is being used today than at any time in the history of the country! In almost every week since Labor Day consumption of electricity has set a new all-time peak.

(9) Machine Tools: The machinery and machine tool industry is small compared with such giants as building, railroads and steel. Nevertheless, it is a vital barometer of activity in the labyrinth of industries such as cutlery, business machines, aviation, radio, hardware, railroad equipment and the like. Hence, it is very encouraging to learn that machine tool orders in recent weeks have smashed all previous records!

Opinion Divided on Trend

This is the most bullish report on American business that I have been able to write for two years. There is no forecasting in what I have said above. All statements are facts concerning what has happened. Whether or not activity can continue at the present pace is another question and one which is too difficult to answer right now. Some observers believe that this boom was touched off by the war and will fold up like an accordion if hostilities are suddenly halted. Others insist that the tremendous step-up in industrial activity was already under way this summer and would have taken place, though less rapidly war or no war.

I have not had time yet to study the situation and take any position on this question. Perhaps the answer is a middle ground—somewhere between the above two views. However, unless retailers boost their merchandising efforts and keep their cash registers clanging, the industrial boom will peter out. In order to maintain our current pace raw materials and goods which have been purchased in anticipation of higher prices must move along to the customer so that new orders can be placed with manufacturers and raw material suppliers. A few weeks should tell the story.

With Him, Making Friends Is Like Pulling Teeth

New York, Oct. 22 (AP).—Capt. William Sallsten, 48, a Finnish-American sea captain, expects to make friends with natives on his trip around the world by pulling their aching teeth.

For this reason he included forceps in his large medical kit, which he packed tonight for an early morning departure aboard his 25-foot Catamaran—an oaken raft covering three parallel floats.

Capt. Sallsten will follow alone in the frail craft he built on the Hudson two years ago a route with which he became familiar in steamships: Panama, San Francisco, Honolulu, Pago Pago, Fiji Islands, New Zealand, Australia, Singapore, Suez, the Mediterranean and the Southern Atlantic route.

Hindu Officials Told to Quit in Home Rule Drive

Wardha, India, Oct. 22 (INS).—India's nationalist leaders tonight called upon native members of the government to resign in protest against Britain's failure to pledge self-rule for India in return for aid in the European war.

The call for mass resignation of many hundreds of Indian officials—which amounts to an order—was contained in a resolution issued by the executive committee of the powerful All-India National Congress of which Mohandas K. Ghandi is the leading political generalissimo.

Ghandi only a few days ago said emphatically India will not help the British in their "war against Hitler" unless federal government is granted immediately.

The British government's white paper last Tuesday promised "at the conclusion of the war" to give full consideration to a plan for future self-government by India.

Film Director Jailed In Immigration Probe

Los Angeles, Oct. 22 (AP).—Alfred J. Goulding, 53, veteran film producer and director, was summoned today before an immigration inspector for a hearing on charges he entered the United States illegally.

Inspector Henderson remanded Goulding to the county jail in lieu of $500 bail and delayed the hearing until the director could obtain counsel. Authorities said he came to this country from his home, Melbourne, Australia, in 1912.

Pastor Calls Peace Possible If Christ Rules

Dr. Pruden Blames War on Hatreds, Not Invasion of Poland

Peace is possible, but only in a world animated by the spirit of Christ, Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden declared yesterday at the First Baptist Church's observance of Nation-wide "Peacemaker's Sunday."

The launching of "China Relief Week" in Protestant churches, Catholic Mission Sunday and congregational homecomings and anniversaries also drew attention in the Washington area.

President of the Washington Federation of Churches, Dr. Pruden yesterday addressed 2,000 persons at a sunrise service on the State Capitol steps at Richmond, as fraternal messenger from the Northern Baptist Convention to the International Convention of the Disciples of Christ.

Blames War on Hatreds

He sped back to Washington to address the 11 a. m. service, when he reminded his congregation of the tremendous costs of war in men, morals and money, and declared that the present war did not begin with Hitler's march into Poland, but with an accumulation of hatreds.

Meanwhile, Dr. Oliver J. Hart marked his fifth year as pastor of St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette square, Tabor Presbyterian Church celebrated its fifteenth birthday and the National Baptist Memorial and North Carolina Avenue Methodist congregations observed annual homecoming days.

Cleveland Park Community Congregational Church welcomed its new pastor, the Rev. Paul Yinger, at vespers; Dr. Andrew R. Bird, pastor, and Andrew R. Bird, jr., ministerial student, father and son, addressed services at the Presbyterian Church of the Pilgrims. Dad's Day was celebrated at American University with services at Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church.

Dr. Perkins Returns

Among ten or more guest preachers here yesterday, Dr. Frederick W. Perkins, addressing his former congregation at the Universalist National Memorial Church, said no church can live whose primary purpose is to reform other people's theological opinions, "as much as that may be needed."

Dr. Perkins, now of Boston, was a delegate to the Universalist parley, which closed here Friday.

Christ brought a complete set of new human values into the world, asserted the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, dean of Washington Cathedral, at yesterday morning's rites, "and taught the true meaning of prayer, fasting and righteous living."

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

The most important of the proprieties at bridge is that players must avoid by word, manner or gesture any indication of the nature of the hand held.

Maj. Browning, of the London Sketch, prefaces his tirade against artificial conventions which locate aces, kings and queens with this remark: No matter whether it safely steers unsteady bidders to slams; no matter whether it is Culbertson's four-five no-trump call, Blackwood's convention or the Four Aces natural ace-showing, he is against it.

The major says that all such naming of honors is nothing more than illegal "humming and hawing," nothing less than piracy.

The major no doubt would like every slam bid as today's hand, right into six without the mentioning of an ace or a king.

Here is the way J. Edward Morrow, Dallas expert, reports the play as he witnessed it: "At some of the tables West led the trey of clubs to fool South into reading West for four cards in clubs. Then when South led his first trump and discovered West held four hearts, South might misfigure the distribution in the remaining two suits and set himself.

"As soon as the declarer led a high heart, they got the sad news. When West showed up with four trumps, the thoughtful South players realized the only way the hand might make was to find West's distribution to be 4—3—3—3.

"Then accomplish a three-suit strip of West's hand and throw West in with a small trump. These South players cashed two spades and ruffed the third in dummy, then played three rounds of diamonds and trumped the third. The remaining two high clubs were taken, and when West followed to the last they knew that he was down to three cards, all trumps.

"South led the small heart, which threw West into the lead, and he had to play back a heart away from the queen-four into South's ace-ten, letting the declarer make six hearts.

Chapter 20

IT WAS easy to make him forget that slip, to make him forget everything except the left! right! left! right! of his dragging feet. He was in Clifford now, on the back street next to the mountain, along which he must have raced out to the country road. The few houses were black and closed. The creaking of the snow under his feet, as he stumbled along, was the only sound in the frost-paralyzed world. A recurrent whitening of the sky above him made him think that probably the Northern Lights were streaming up behind him, beyond Hemlock Mountain. But he was too tired, too cold, too stiff, too absorbed on pushing his way through his thick fatigue, like a diver pushing his way through the pressure of mid-ocean depths. He would not turn his head to see the aurora. He had seen it before. He would look at it another time. He must concentrate now on reaching the refuge of his own house, dark and sleeping like the others, but warm. It was not far now. One more stretch of the pound, pound of his aching feet and he would be in sight of it.

But it was not dark. Every window of the two lower stories gleamed yellow and flung out foreshortened squares of gold on the heaped-up snow. What could have happened? Was Aunt Lavinia ill? He had thought the last few days she looked a little as though she might be drifting into one of her bad periods?

His conscience darted a suspicious look at a door the lock of which could not be trusted, saw it swinging open ever so little, and leaped up in frantic haste to slam it tight. The rush, the slamming of the door—they were gone before Timothy knew what they had been, aware only of a faintly sickening flutter in his heart, quickly stilled.

Anxious and remorseful that he had left her when she might need him, he walked as rapidly as the knotted muscles of his thighs would let him along the side of the tennis-court rinks and came up before the house, close enough to see through an uncurtained window in the livingroom that Aunt Lavinia sat there, in a dressing gown, her night cap on, leaning back in her chair, laughing, a glass in her hand. She was not ill then. He drew a long breath.

A car stood on the curve of the driveway, he saw now. Who in Clifford would leave an automobile out with the thermometer at 20 below zero? No one in Clifford; the license was a Wisconsin one. Wisconsin! He stood gaping. The car was small and battered. Its canvas top was patched, one mudguard gone.

His shoulders, his back, his lungs, the exhausted muscles of his legs—none of them acknowledging any responsibility for keeping him alive—were enchanted to have him stand still, and began deliciously to relax, cold or no cold.

The door of his house was flung open, a man's figure stood in the oblong of light, a voice cried, "Well, Uncle Tim, welcome to our city."

Timothy started stiffly up the steps. A tall, loose-jointed man ran down to meet him. His cold hand was taken into warm flexible muscular fingers, a gay voice began facetiously, "Aunt Lavinia and I were thinking of starting the fire department and the sheriff out after you . . ." The grip on his fingers tightened, the light voice deepened to affection—incredulous, astonished at itself—"You haven't changed a hair! Why, gosh, Uncle Tim! You look just the same!"

His hand was being shaken interminably. They were standing in the hall now, the light fell on a familiar, blunt-nosed, big-jawed face topped by tousled hair, one lock sticking up at the back. Brown eyes shown behind glasses; the broad smile showed irregular teeth, the two in front crossed slightly, like a schoolboy's.

Before he himself knew who was there, his hand recognized the newcomer. It suddenly came to life and began returning with astonished warmth the absurd pumping Anglo-Saxon up-and-down substitute for a caress. "Why, Can!" he cried, his eyes searching the ugly, attractive, bulldog face. "Why, Canby Hunter, how in the Lord's world did you ever get here!"

HE OPENED his eyes, looked at the slant ceiling close over his head and put his great square hand up against it. "When it rains hard on the other side of one of these attic ceilings, it sounds like a drum rolling, doesn't it?" He sat up, leaned forward, said earnestly, "Let me tell you something, Uncle Tim—it wasn't only tennis!"

"Why, Canby!" exclaimed Timothy, touched and astonished.

They shook hands heartily and said good night.

Timothy was halfway down to his room at the other end of the hall when he heard a few long opened and Canby's voice whispered hoarsely, "Blankets in the closet nothing! What's in the closet is some dirty underwear and a frying pan!"

Timothy was still trying to stifle his laughter when he stepped into his own room. But Canby was forgotten before he had closed the door behind him and put on the light. He was thinking with elation, "Why, I don't need to wait a week! I could write her. I could sit down and write her this instant."

He pulled a chair up to his table, fumbled for paper in a drawer, took out his fountain pen and began in the large square handwriting familiar to two decades of Academy students, "My darling Susan: I am just back from your old home—yes,

I went all the way up to the old house on foot—and the reason I did was because . . ."

He wrote four pages at top speed, and then in the middle of the fifth stopped abruptly. It had occurred to him that his handwriting must to Susan's eye, be colored with a thousand prosaic and impersonal teacher-and-school-superintendent associations of marginal corrections on English themes and revisions of classroom programs. He pushed this idea away from him with a startled "Ha!" but after a moment's hesitation tore up what he had written, thinking as he pushed away from the table, "If there is one thing a man wants to say with his own voice and his own arms, and one thing a woman wants to hear and feel, not read off a piece of paper . . ."

His bent knee had ossified. He was barely able to straighten it enough to hobble to the medicine shelf in the hall. After he had undressed, he sat for some time on the edge of the bed rubbing the aching joint with liniment. But he was not thinknig about liniment. he was not thinking about liniment. light was out, he lay, still smding in the dark.

AT THE BREAKFAST table next morning, Canby, freshly shaved and with his hair combed, looked like any other young businessman who had been for some days driving long and hard, and who had taken on rather too much whisky the night before—a little pale, a little glum, a little older than his age, the lines from his nose to the corners of his mouth deepened. "How's your knee?" he said to Timothy instead of good morning. Timothy swung it back and forth to show it was better. "I told you it was nothing serious."

They ate in silence till Aunt Lavinia said, "Take that last piece of bacon, Canby. It's not so bad as most American bacon. Comes from the Rollins farm."

Canby fell into thought and came out of it with, "Rollins house, story and a half, big maple trees, Churchman's Road, half a mile before the hairpin turn for Searles Shelf." He asked Timothy, "Will the professor of psychology please explain how I remember that, me that's lived in every State in the Union since I was here?" He added, "How come there's still a farmer smokes his own bacon? Out in the packing-house country where I've been, they say they can't afford to."

"Well, they can't here, of course," said Timothy.

"I wish you'd tell me how they afford to live at all?" asked Canby, lighting a cigarette. "Driving along yesterday and looking at the country—why, good God, Uncle Tim, there's no farming land! No business either. I kept thinking, 'How does anybody make a living!' "

"They don't. Not really. A lot of them think they're using up their last reserves. When one of the abandoned settlements is mentioned—you know, like the one that used to be on the Crandall Pitch—you can see that they're wondering when their town will go."

"But how'd they ever do it? That's what I'd like to know."

It was a subject on which Timothy had thought a good deal. He launched forth—"Well, general farming used to pay here—just about as it did anywhere. No money in it, but people brought up their families on it, and got their children educated." He looked back into the past. "There were some paying specialties too. There are still a few. In some towns they used to make money out of sheep. Real money. Most of the first pure bred Merinos came from Vermont. The biggest part of the academy endowment, what there is of it, was a bequest from one of those old sheep raisers. Twenty years ago, when I first came here, you'd often meet one of the older men who'd been to Australia in charge of a cargo of Merino stock. But of course when it comes to big flocks—big the way all modern business has got to be, to survive—why, Australian plains can beat Vermont hill pastures. And now that all have got the seed, why, all can raise the flower. So sheep have gone. Granite and marble are being driven out of the market by concrete and steel. Things that used to be made in the small woodenware mills are made of metal now, somewhere else. The wooden mills have almost disappeared. Of course there's still dairying. Didn't you ever hear it said that there are more cows than people in Vermont? But dairying's like everything else. It's only the big combinations that can hold their own. The individual farmer hasn't a look-in. The twentieth century knife is out for anything that's not on a huge scale. Still, there's something rather interesting in the air, there, the co-operative movement."

Still full of his subject, he paused for breath and to finish his coffee. Canby, lounging loose-jointed in his chair, had been fiddling absently with his fork. He now turned his hand over and looked attentively at his fingernails.

"I'm boring him!" thought Timothy, astonished, netlled and resentful, yet remembering how, when he was Canby's age, he had suffered under the tendency of older people to take a simple question as excuse for a lecture.

HE SAID no more about dairy co-operatives, but setting down his empty coffee cup, kept a rather grim silence. In it, a whispering murmur from Aunt Lavinia became audible, "Wo die weis-sen Wass-er plat-schern," she hummed, indicating the accented notes with her knotted hand. Her face was rapt and absent. Canby heard her too and grinned. "Nobody can bore her, talking business," he said cheerfully.

Timothy was not especially amused. He stood up and tried his knee again. "We'd better move on. There'll be trouble if Lottie finds us still at the table when she comes." They began to move towards the hall.

Canby said, "Well, I guess I'll go out and bat around the old town, and see if I'd know anybody."

"Why, you'll know everybody. You talk as if you'd been away for 50 years."

"I feel as though I had!"

"You'll find quite a lot of your own classmates here. Herbert Crane has gone into the store with his father. Ed Randall is in the bank. Do you remember that lame Margaret Parr? Mr. Dewey has taken her into his sawmill to keep his books. Some of them are married. Ed Randall has a boy and a—"

"Thank you! It'd give me the jitters to see anybody that was married."

He picked up his felt hat, rather broader of brim than Clifford hats, and put his hands on the doorknob. "Well, so long. Shall I get your mail when I'm out?"

"Hold on! For heaven's sake, hold on!" said Timothy, pulling him away from the door. "You haven't looked at the thermometer. You don't know what to wear yet. Where do you think you are? Florida? Maybe it is 50 years since you were here!"

They went to a window together and looked out at the tube of mercury. Canby whistled. "Twelve below, with the sun shining like that!" He tossed his hat over his head in a long curve which landed it on the piano. "What's anybody got to offer me in the way of parkas?" His eye slid past the thermometer, caught the feathery tip of a snowy hemlock above the rim of Lundy Brook Hollow (they were looking from a south window) and passed on to the long reach of the valley, its rolling fields white, the shadow of every tree and bush long and sapphire blue, the dark, moving waters of the river like polished onyx under the filigree silver of the frosted alders overhanging it. Timothy, startled by the change in the young man's face, followed the direction of his eyes and saw with him the familiar miracle of the winter contrast between the gleaming, indomitably living water and the frozen world, its earthen body lying rigid in death under the snow's shroud, dead, invisible, forgotten, while its airy soul hovered in crystalline glory above.

He saw his companion's eyes lift to the mountains across the valley, and looked with him at old Hemlock, resplendent in hoarfrost against the clear gold of the oncoming sun, the shadows of its hollows like no other shadows, not the opposite of light but another kind of light, throbbing in an ineffable intensity of blue. The two men gazed in silence. It was the moment when the late winter sun finally rose above The Wall. The brightness behind the mountains was at the summit now, struck a long ray of gold across the valley to the glittering top of Hemlock, and as the sun climbed into the sky, flowed down its slopes, lightening to a higher key the already angelically pure blues and silvers and mauves of the valley, till their heavenly soprano voices sang together.

The sight was a familiar one to Timothy. How many thousand winter sunrises had he seen turn the Necronsett Valley to a street in Paradise! He looked away from it to face so near his own. It astonished him. He would, he thought, hardly have recognized it. He had never thought Canby a boy capable of any esthetic emotions at all, certainly not of this amazed rapture. His lips, usually firmly closed, were open a little and quivering. His eyes—why, behind his glasses, the boy still had those very nice eyes, Timothy saw, their peat-water-brown as clear as when he was 16.

To Be Continued.

Experts Weigh Plan to Rule U. S. Economy

Resources Committee Seeks Democratic Way to Achieve It

By Alfred Friendly

The National Resources Committee has under consideration a new declaration of governmental economic philosophy that would knock pronouncements of the traditional Adam Smith, "laissez-faire" school into a cocked hat.

The thesis is that the Government has a continuing function, in depression and in "normalcy," to insure best utilization of the Nation's natural, industrial and human resources.

Inference From Factual Study

Such a declaration has been suggested and considered as a policy to underlie Part Two of the committee's monumental study, "The Structure of the American Economy." First part of the work, running to almost 400 pages, was published a few weeks ago. Some committee economists have held that the policy is the major inference to be drawn from the facts in Part One.

On publication of the first section, the committee forecast conferences to determine the basis for future recommendations, and to decide if a second section is in order. Part One was a factual study, without conclusions.

Since then, one conference has been held. The committee membership, which, with its advisory groups, is almost a roster of the Brain Trust, set out to discuss implications of the facts.

At the conference, according to report, the argument was made that the published study showed that the old, classical reliance on price changes, free competition, and operation of the "free market" is not enough to guarantee that the Nation's resources—its farms, rivers, forests, factories and workers—shall be used to the optimum.

Wide Regulation Hinted

The inference from this according to one closely associated with the committee, is that to the Government's established functions of setting up conditions conducive to economic enterprise—enforcement of contracts and payment of debts, regulation of certain fields, and actual operation of such enterprises as the postal service—there be added another function: That of direction and regulation of the country's whole economy, viewed as a single problem. This might involve financial regulation, investment of public funds in industry, or even regulation of plant operations.

Obviously, this would be economic participation similar to that in a totalitarian state. And one problem would be, how to accomplish it by democratic methods.

The committee, however, is still far from suggesting such a plan of action. As a matter of fact, it has not determined whether to issue a set of conclusions to its first report; much less conclusions of such importance.

Pay Promotions Sought

In its program to persuade the Budget Bureau to provide a uniform grant of administrative promotions—salary increases within the same grade—to employes throughout the Government, the United Federal Workers has cited Bureau of Labor Statistics figures to show that the rising cost of living has brought what amounts to a 3 1-3 per cent pay cut.

The union's argument, which an independent check at the Agriculture Department Consumer's Counsel verifies, is that in the last month food costs have risen about 10 per cent. Food constitutes about one-third of the average family budget. The "pay cut," in terms of reduced purchasing power, thus amounts to slightly more than 3 per cent. For a $1,400 to $1,600 salary, the "cut" is from $40 to $60, or, conveniently, the amount of a one-step administrative promotion.

The union is also asking for a double pay jump for eligible employes who have not seen a raise in five years, and is starting fires at the Budget Bureau for elimination of the "average clause," traditional provision in appropriation laws forbidding the average of all salaries of the one grade in a certain governmental unit to exceed the average for that grade.

Randolph L. Jennings, 1609 Olive street northeast, gave up a dollar and a gold ring to three youths who grabbed him in the 1600 block of H street northwest. One of them struck him on the head with a blackjack.

Breaking Ground for Ryland Methodist Church

Ground was broken yesterday for the $75,000 Ryland Methodist Church and educational building at Branch avenue and S street southeast. Beery, superintendent of the East Washington District of the Baltimore Conference, Methodist Church; J. W. Martin, president of the Hillcrest Citizens' Association; Walter M. Bastian, president of the Methodist Union; Edward B. Wilcox, Trinity Methodist pastor; T. J. Lynch, of the Mount Dome and Hollywood Park communities; George Barker, of the Randle Highlands Citizens' Association; the Rev. Glenn Faucett, pastor of East Washington Heights Baptist Church, and the Rev. Karl G. Newell, pastor of Ryland Church

America must ever safeguard its priceless heritage of religious liberty, J. W. Martin, president of the Hillcrest Citizens Association, declared yesterday at groundbreaking ceremonies for the new $75,000 Ryland Methodist Church and educational building at Brance avenue and S street southeast.

Sharing a program with other religious and civic leaders, Martin spoke shortly before the first earth was turned by Mrs. Fred S. Cawson, oldest member in point of service of the Ryland Church, and Mrs. William Houlton, an octogenarian member.

Earlier, Walter M. Bastian, president of the Methodist Union, an organization which donated $4,000 for the lot, said that "while the Ryland Church owes something to the Methodist Union, the Methodist Union owes more to the Ryland Church," and praised the undertaking. The congregation, yesterday celebrated its ninety-sixth birthday.

The Rev. Glenn Faucett, pastor of the East Washington Heights Baptist Church, whose congregation participated, reminded the audience that the new project was in a growing and changing community, but "represented a Christ who is changeless."

Dr. Edgar C. Beery, superintendent of the new East Washington District of the Baltimore Conference, urged recognition of the fact that "the church must minister to the "whole man," including his social side."

A Christian lives in the community, not only as one who is saved to serve, but who also is served to save, said Dr. Beery. He was introduced by the Rev. Karl G. Newell, Ryland pastor, whose own hymn composition was used at the exercises.

Welcoming the new congregation on behalf of the Randle Highlands Citizens' Association, George Barker said he recalled, as a lad, that 65 years ago the only church between Pennsylvania avenue and Benning was the Piney Grove Southern Methodist in Anacostia road near Ridge road.

Broadcaster Chief Defends Radio Code

Declares It Gives All Groups Chance To Air Opinions

Indirectly assailing the resignation of Elliott Roosevelt from the National Association of Broadcasters, Neville Miller, N. A. B. president, yesterday entered a vigorous defense of the new broadcasters' code, which outlaws the sale of radio time for "the discussion of controversial public issues."

Speaking from Washington over a Columbia network of 45 stations, Miller denied that the code bars opinion from the air. It merely provides, he said, "that those holding other views shall not be deprived of the right to present their views under similar conditions."

Without mentioning Elliott Roosevelt's name, Miller hit at the expression of "personal opinions under the guise of news." He went on to say that "the job of the news broadcasters in a democracy ends with the presentation of the news as it happens.

"If one giving a news broadcast wishes to express on the air his personal opinion about a public controversial matter, he has an opportunity to do so on time freely allotted for the discussion of public controversial questions, but his opinion does not belong on a news broadcast."

Elliott Roosevelt in a broadcast on October 7 defied the N. A. B. to stop him from expressing his opinion on neutrality issues in his news comments. Friday, however, after action by the N. A. B., the Mutual Broadcasting System announced that he would confrm to the code in his network comments. At the same time the President's eldest son stated that he would resign from the N. A. B. and take with him ten Texas station members.

The code restrictions on news commentators also apply to others who may seek to purchase radio time to discuss controversial subjects.

Miller maintained yesterday that before the code was adopted "there was a danger that, due to the mere possession of money, various groups might monopolize, dominate or control the discussion of public issues over the radio, precluding a fair opportunity for the opposition.
